"Year at whose wide-flung door I sing!
Year of the purpose accomplished!"

... Walt Whitman, Passage to India

A door opens and light shines through. A W-Lite passes from one room to another, from one experience to another, from one year to another. At Washington-Lee there are many wide-flung doors. Each student and faculty member realizes that a job is to be done — a threshold to be crossed. The student selects his schedule and confronts his gateway of knowledge. The athlete becomes a part of a team and approaches the doorway of victory. The club member pays his dues and advances toward the portal of leadership and service. Only through work and perseverance can the individual pass through his door, shut it behind him and look to new gates — those of the future.

Year of Participation Accomplished

Participation — cheers of support, dramatic productions, nights of dancing, all reveal school life enjoyed, a threshold crossed.

Abundant Fall Activities Add Pep to School Life

Brisk fall weather sparked a myriad of school activities. On the first day of school, Student Council members acquainted newcomers with Washington-Lee's aims and traditions during Sophomore Orientation and invited them to join the numerous clubs springing into existence. Chosen by varsity cheerleading co-captains and gym teachers, the junior varsity squad, composed of five sophomores and four juniors, made their first appearance in late September at the Falls Church football game.

Later in October, students became more familiar with many colleges and universities at College Night and the Student Council offered its annual training conference to explain problems and offer suggestions to prospective leaders.

Parents and students listen attentively as Dean Landon Fuller from V.P.I. explains campus life during a college night session.

Indian summer sunshine coaxes Athletic Director Albert Haringer to lime the ball field.

Cheesecake poses, sparkling smiles and short skirts camouflage the masculinity of Alpha Tri-Hi-Y cheerleaders who urged their team to victory over the Sigma Tri-Hi-Y squad in the first intra-club football contest.

Milling around the bench, Sigma's "powder-puffs" cheerfully look forward to the battle.

	Norman Levin
Elizabeth Almond	Mary Ruder
Arthur Townsend	Charles Zier
Marian Almond	Linda Jenstrom
	Shirley Kincaid
Morris Townsend	Al Towberman
	Jim Dorr
Mrs. Montgomery	Sue Pilger

Undaunted by a bullying father's attempt to estrange them, Norma Levin and her suitor Al Towberman kiss at a temporary parting.

Pride, hurt and anger showing in her face, one of the double cast leading ladies of The Heiress, Jane Singer, reproaches sweetheart Jim Dorr for leaving her to go fortune hunting after her father threatened to take her money away.

"You can't shelter her forever," scolds Phyllis Richmond, in the guise of Mrs. Penniman, as she rebukes Dr. Austin Sloper, John Underdahl, for forbidding the marriage of his daughter.

Listening attentively for directions from stage hands "out front," crew members Anne Alexander, Elinor Gammon and Jerry Waters await cues to begin concluding door pounding and fadeout.

Intent on every movement and every inflection of the voice, cognizant of every cue missed, ready to offer a suggestion or help with the building of a set, the man behind the scenes of The Heiress, Director James Townsend, accompanied by Thespian apprentice Susan Armentrout, takes his place in the darkened auditorium for an audience's viewpoint of his fall production during the dress rehearsal that climaxed hours of practice.

Turkey Day Excitement

Thanksgiving festivities get off to an early start for Karen Walton and Marty Canada at the Booster Club's pre-game send-off breakfast.

All eyes fasten on the flame-consumed effigy of a doomed George Washington High School football player at the climax of the Beta Bon Fire.

"Hey, man, watch the pedestrians!" shout Key Club members George Woodzell and Bob Bedell in self-defense as they and compatriot John Bengston guide their prize-winning "victory football" around War Memorial Stadium.

In a desperate bid to score for the first time in four Turkey Day games, George Washington High School's players break for the goal posts and seven points, but all to no avail for the Generals never lost the lead, winning 14 to 7.

Cheers momentarily change to groans as apprehensive fans watch the Presidents stride toward a touchdown.

Pausing at the threat of defeat, Nancy Babb plans morale-boosting strategy as George Washington prepares to score.

Christmas is for Giving

Giving of himself, the essence of Christmas, Brian Spinks extends a gaily wrapped package and a friendly hand to a pensive Washington orphan at the Eta Hi-Y holiday party which featured a visit from Santa to District youngsters.

Dwarfed by one of the Art Department's Magi, Beta members usher at the Music Department's annual Christmas Candlelight Concert.

Donating their talents, two art students cast twin silhouettes against their mosaic.

Canned hams, powdered milk and sweet potatoes catch the eyes of Orchestra members Frances Rice, Mike Birdsong, Beth Flow and Linda Whitney as they examine Christmas baskets prepared by homerooms for the needy.

Assemblies – Ideas, Fun

"Now what we want is spirit, so yell!" barks Omega's pseudo cheerleader Ted Bahn to uncooperative juniors in the Wakefield rally.

Presenting the opposing view on revision of student forum procedures, junior Sally Wasserman advises listening voters to reject Student Council-proposed changes.

Microphone in hand, Roy Collins transmits Luba Klein's opinion of the Library Drive during the Student Council's Aims assembly.

Honored at a surprise autumn assembly, eighty-three thrilled initiates repeat the National Honor Society oath read by Mr. O. U. Johansen, principal.

With an abundance of enthusiasm and energy, Karen Reider and Linda Georgie set the pace for the cheerleaders in October during the Fairfax football pep-rally, Washington-Lee's first mass showing of school support for the team.

"All I want for Twithmas ith my two front teeth . . ." lips the soloist from the chorus accompanying the United States

Army Field Band at a mid-morning concert sponsored by the Future Business Leaders and the business department.

Facing two thousand holiday-bound W-Lites, the Reverend F. Bennett McDonald of the Clarendon Methodist Church imparts solemnity to Thanksgiving.

In the American Field Service assembly, Peter Freyer clasps the hand of Jim Spicer, his "American brother," after delivering his speech on Germany.

Waiting for silence, basketball coach Maurice Levin pauses before introducing his Virginia champs.

Hand cautiously poised over burning ethyl alcohol, Mr. Guy Johnson of the National Aeronautic and Space Agency pours liquid oxygen over the flames in a demonstration of increasing combustion efficiency for greater rocket power.

Gaiety Reigns at Dances

Climaxing the Turkey Hop, 1960 Football Queen Pat Bowman crowns her successor, Aillene Thomas, after Les Whittington announced the winner.

Discussing which record to play next, Nelson Janes of Omega Hi-Y and Alpha president Mary Wright fail to see Steve Brandt sneak in with his own preference—a twist tune—at the first Hi-Y and Tri-Hi-Y after-dance.

Adding to the mood of the Turkey Hop, rustling petticoats and crepe paper streamers whisper to the "Down-beats" music.

To the strains of Chubby Checker, cheerleader Barbara Veno and the "Mad Hatter," Dave Hoffman, execute the twist at the Nu-Lambda After-Dance.

"Tickets here," says Shirley O'Neal as she admits Linda Bussey and Charles Woodruff to the Dance.

Depositing his date's coat in the improvised cloakroom, Bill Huf prepares to join the throng at the Valentine Dance.

"If you drop me . . ." cheerleader Nancy Babb warns her partner, Bob Nunn, at a Delta after-dance.

King and Queen of Hearts, seniors Michael Marshman and Aillene Thomas, reign over the Valentine Dance.

Dancing among the red hearts and flowers, Nancy Hash and Bill Casey enjoy the festive Valentine Ball.

Keeping pace with vacation fun, Sue Van Leunen and Mike Marshman enjoy the music of the Candy Cane Ball.

Whirlwind Week – Manhasset Exchange

Sporting wide smiles of greeting and toting welcoming posters, Joyce Evans and Joyce and Joan Harmon meet Sandy Williams.

Presenting each Manhasset exchangee with a treasury of memories, Mrs. Eleanor Templeman explains Arlington Heritage to Jed Mannis.

After a mad scramble to claim his suitcases, John Shepard, a domestic exchangee from Manhasset, prepares to meet his host, Charles Beers.

"We are very happy to be here," senior Tony Cueto, president of the domestic exchange from Manhasset High School, New York, assures W-Lites during the assembly sponsored by the Student Council to introduce the visitors.

Replete with refreshments, Manhasset exchanges chat in the White House after receiving gift Blue and Grays from the yearbook staff.

Yearbook signing by candlelight—seniors Florence Finlator and Ted Bahn autograph exchangee Carole Newman's 1961 Blue and Gray.

SPRING

Underclassmen Triumph In Classic Court Battle

Two mangled flags, hoarse cheers and a disillusioned senior class characterized the first event of spring. Held on March 23, the annual Junior-Senior basketball game saw the class of 1963 triumph by a close score of 35 to 33.

At the Beta Charity Ball, six talented seniors competed for the title of Miss W-L. Judges selected Pam Harrison to reign over the dance, planned around the theme of the "Roaring Twenties." Later in April, girls supplied their own dates for the traditional Sadie Hawkins Dance.

With the cooperation of the student body and other Arlington County schools, the Student Council promoted a door-to-door fund-raising drive to provide the Central Library with needed books.

Pointing to a component of a Nuclear Transformation Chamber, Mike Spink explains his Science Fair project to a bemused judge.

Firing questions at Mike Omohundro, Pam Sheldon and Mac Shawen, emcee Mac McGarry of the Television show,

"It's Academic," quizzes during a practice session a few minutes before air-time and the actual filming of the program.

Sporting the latest in court fashions, Miss Louise Russell and Mrs. Grace Thomas appraise their sophomore rivals.

Sporting Bermuda Day togs, Key Brendel, Pete Hill and Sue Johnson prepare for finals in the May sun.

Lending a Polynesian air to the Beta Charity Ball, Pam Harrison croons her way to the title of Miss W-L.

'Remember When ...'

While covering her precinct for the Central Library's book drive, senior volunteer Marty Graves solicits contributions from Mrs. Anne Haas.

Engrossed in their fellow students, opinions, senior Loretta Fowler and sophomore Pam Gordon take time between classes to study short signed statements written and posted by other W-Lites who protested against cheating in school.

Cameras whirring, history in the making, a large percentage of students out of school for the occasion cheered Lieutenant Colonel John H. Glenn perched in an open car with Vice-President Lyndon B. Johnson at the parade welcoming the astronaut to the nation's capital after he had successfully completed his historic orbital flight three times around the globe from Cape Canaveral, Florida, February 22.

Taking advantage of their position directly across from the White House, members of the Pep Band perform a rousing number in honor of Astronaut John Glenn as his car leaves 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue in preparation for the motorcade to the Capitol.

Year of Cooperation Accomplished

Cooperation — answers to questions, research in the library, preparedness for tests, all show knowledge gained, a threshold crossed.

"Frames should flatter their paintings," muses art student Dave Garber as he measures a mat for his latest painting.

Meticulously choosing and blending colors, senior Leslie Cobb puts the finishing touches on an art project.

Stained glass window paintings demand concentration and steadiness of Diana James, Jesse Greene and Sandra Welborn.

ART

Gallery Representatives Visit Annual Art Show

Blue ribbons and money from the sale of pictures enticed art students to display the results of months of hard labor in the school's annual art show. Work started early in the fall as artists began designing programs and invitations. Criticism of former exhibits helped the Art Department plan a more successful one this year.

With the exception of homeroom doors, the Art Department was in charge of decorating the entire school for Christmas. Emulating stained glass, art students painted religious scenes on the windows of the office and art room. They also constructed four paper Wisemen, varying in height from eight to ten feet, as decorations at the entrance of the auditorium for the Candlelight Concert.

Under the direction of shirt-sleeved artist Mary Ellen O'Brien, Lee Robertson emerges from a mound of clay.

BUSINESS

Visitors Attend Classes During Education Week

Businessmen of the area reverted to their high school days and attended classes during American Education Week. They sat in on bookkeeping, note-hand, typing and shorthand courses in an attempt to get acquainted with the preparation of business hopefuls. At the end of the week, a coffee hour enabled visitors to talk to students and teachers.

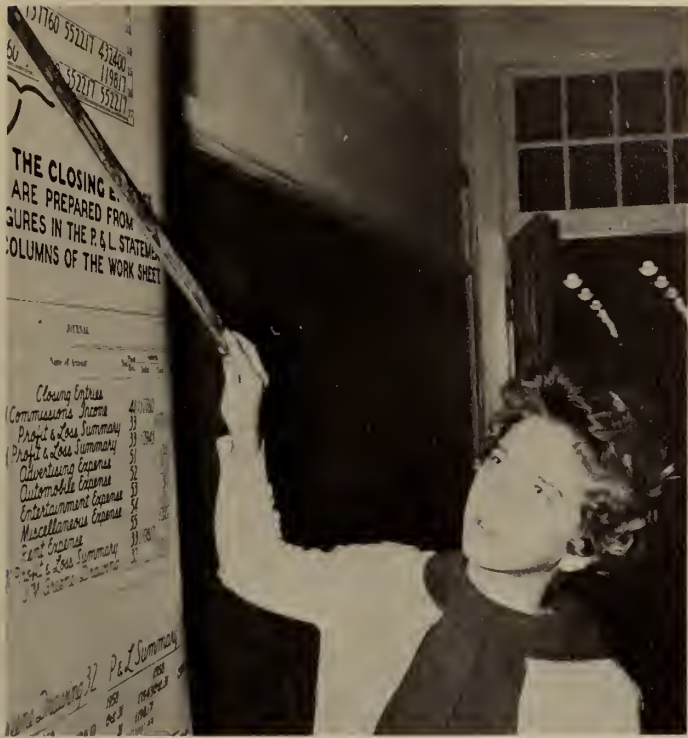

Typing up report cards and Penman-sponsored student directories provided Clerical Office Practice trainees with a chance to put their typing skills to use. Working with the ditto and adding machines also fitted into the class program.

Being folded into a small space between two desks in note-hand class seems to have little effect on Al Toberman.

Adjusting her paper, Betty Austin finds in clerical practice that the bookkeeping machine is not as complex as it seems.

Using a detailed wall chart, sophomore Sandra Hoover demonstrates the proper method for a bookkeeping form.

"Fifteen cents?" Patty Plaine checks the price of paper in the school store before giving Diane Withorn her dollar.

Typewriters click as Carl Stein, Elizabeth Therkelsen, Fred Sanders and Jill Marvel take a timed writing test.

With bowed heads and clasped hands, foreign language students concentrate on elusive words drifting over the lab earphones.

"Avez-vous préparé votre devoir pour aujourd'hui?" Dr. Marijane Pellow listens through earphones to answers by her captive audience.

Time out for a chat — Russian teacher Mr. Samuel Mallia gives junior Sally Wasserman an opportunity to practice speaking the language during the class period and listens carefully for any mistakes in pronunciation or diction.

FOREIGN LANGUAGE

Language Lab Develops Speech, Comprehension

"Mademoiselle, will you please speak more distinctly?" Such a remark might have startled students making use of the just completed language laboratory located in room 100. Available to all foreign language students, the lab gave pupils an opportunity to develop their comprehension and speaking ability. First and second year classes received priority when scheduling laboratory assignments. To compensate, third and fourth year students acquired two booths in their classrooms.

Twelve teachers, four of whom had just joined the faculty, instructed would-be linguists, emphasizing not only a working knowledge of grammar, but also speaking skill and comprehension. Beginning Russian was offered for the first time; however, French still remained the most popular language.

"Testing, testing . . .," records Peter Daymont demonstrating language equipment with Diana Gawen.

HEALTH AND PHYSICAL EDUCATION

Students Master Safety, Courtesy Behind Wheel

"I understand, Mrs. Webb. The flashing red light on the black car you hit blinded you." Fortunately, the trials of Bob Newhart's Mrs. Webb were not those of the students enrolled in the Driver Education courses offered by the Physical Education Department during the school day.

Archery, golf and tennis highlighted the girls' gym course, while the boys' program emphasized the more traditional sports such as baseball, football and soccer. All gym classes took the revised physical fitness tests three times during the year to judge student stamina and skill.

As play moves downfield and tension relaxes, Donna Griggs takes time out from defending the team's goal in field hockey.

In the brisk fall air, grimly determined Bob Cocker prepares to do battle with an elusive soccer ball during an outdoor physical education session.

"This, boys, is a basketball; take a good look at it because you'll be using it often," explains Mr. Roger Coggins to members of his physical education class.

Short, No-Credit Classes Precede Holiday Season

'61-'62 became a time of experiment in the Home Economics Department. Second and third period study hall students participated in short courses without credit. The twelve week, special-interest classes covered such topics as "Clothing for Men" and "Christmas for Teens."

Five sparkling kitchen units and an enlarged clothing laboratory enticed more girls into the intricacies of preparing foods and making clothes.

According to custom, the department presented its two fashion shows. Only sophomore and junior girls attended the first of these in January. The second and more important one was given for all students at an assembly in May.

Mademoiselle Fifi, the home economics mannequin, stares as Sandy Rhodes and Carol Downs pin cloth.

Serving as chief butler, Michael Thrall offers fresh sugar doughnuts as a part of the breakfast being served to Jean Koerbel, Norma Webb, Ann Merrill and Norma Hopkins who prepared the cuisine during a cooking unit.

"Muffins that taste like Grandmother's," predict Foods Class baking experts, Norma Hopkins and Kathy West.

Using a steam iron and a sleeve board, Virginia Bateman carefully presses her dress before she tries it on.

Apparently satisfied with the results of her sewing project, Elizabeth Whisman displays her recently completed outfit.

Pensively nibbling on a screw driver, junior Donnie Leaman determines the next step of a project.

"Let a girl show you how to do it," exclaims the shop's female apprentice Cecilia Hall to a dubious Ted Duvall.

Striving for precision and accuracy, sophomore Jay Tucker patiently prepares a drawing for an industrial arts course.

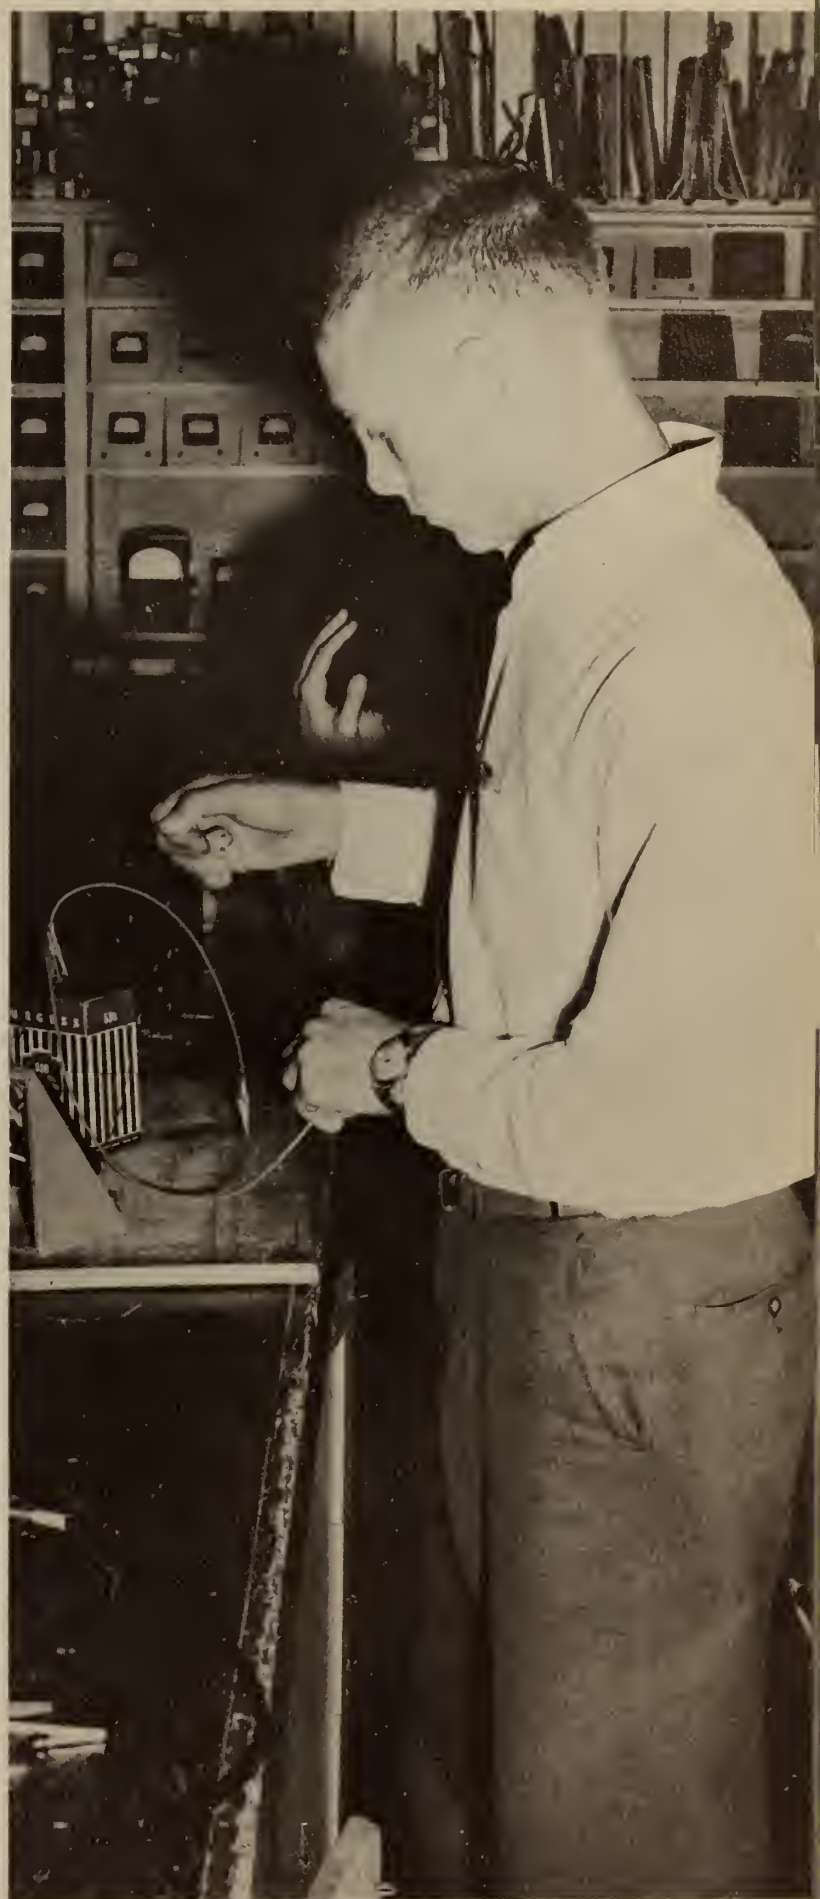

INDUSTRIAL ARTS

Air Conditioning Classes Enhance Shop Program

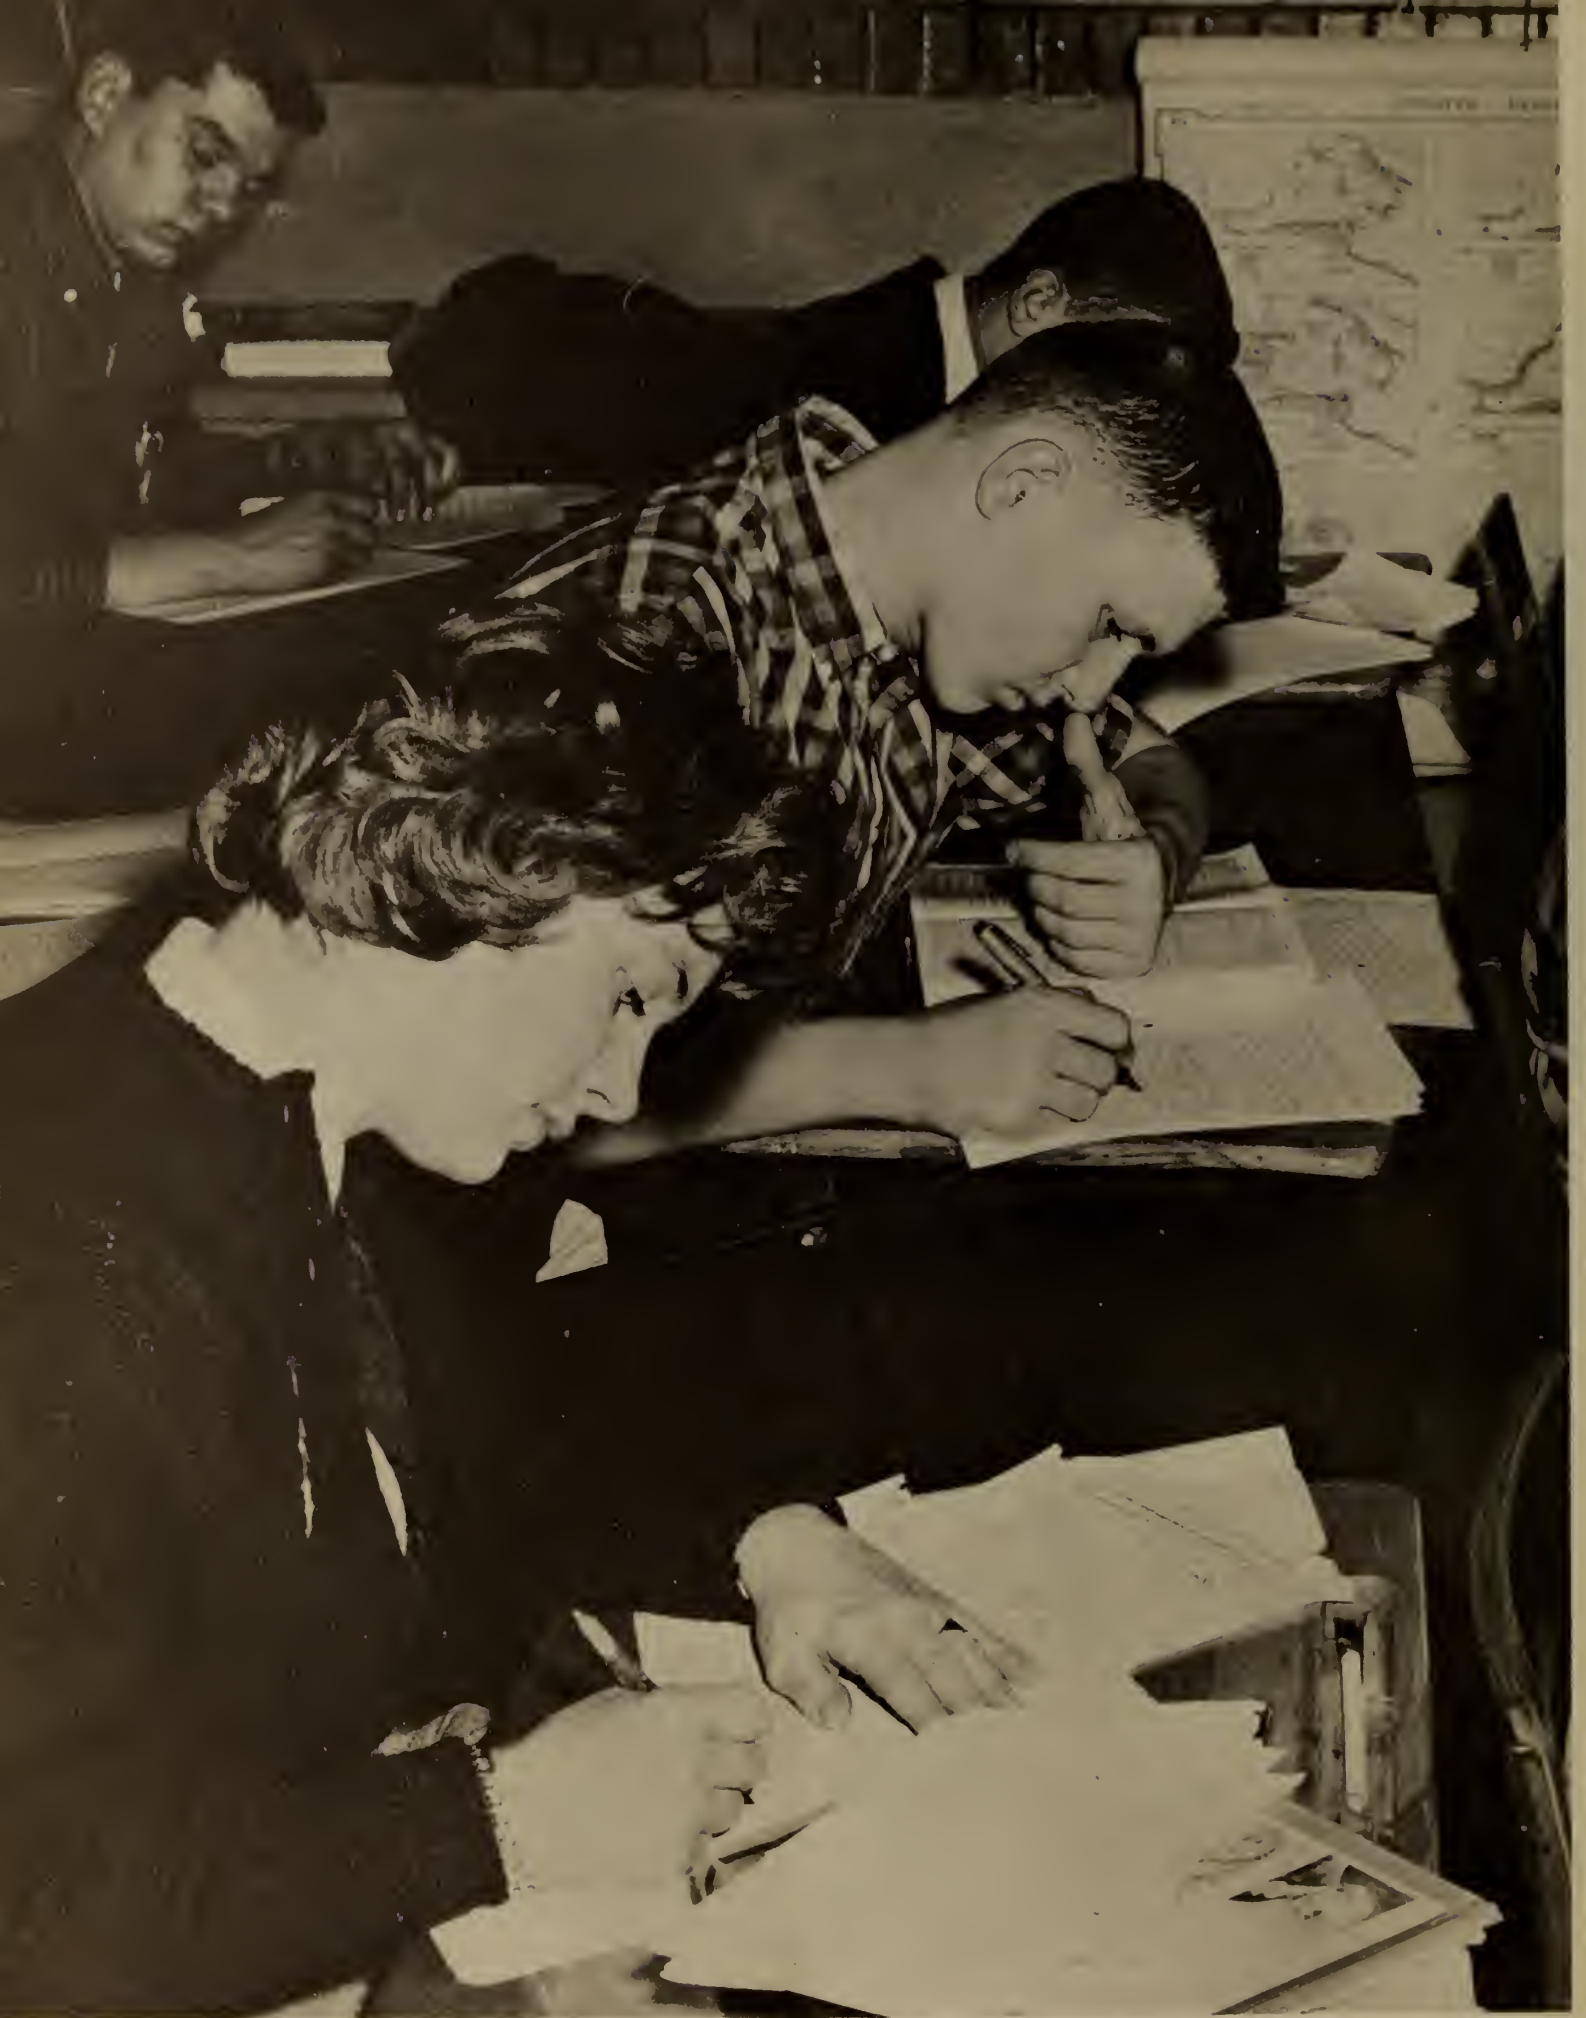

"Something interesting is going on all the time," said Mr. Bruno Paras, Chairman of Industrial Arts, in reference to the exceptional quantity and quality of activity in the shop building.

Educational television became available to advanced electronic students who constructed an attachable mechanism to convert sets for reception of ultra-high frequency stations such as WETA, channel 26. The newly-initiated vocational arts program taught air-conditioning and mechanics to boys from all Arlington county schools.

Various shop departments contributed to the school through a boat show, printed materials and repair of student and faculty autos.

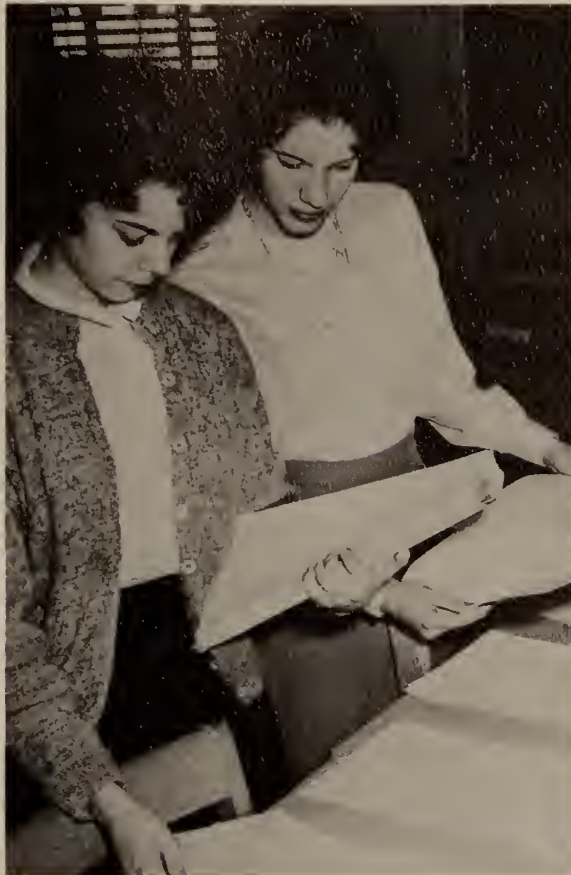

Amid connecting wires and electronic apparatus, Charles Baker adjusts battery-powered radio equipment.

Isolated in a world of note cards, first drafts, misspelled words and corrections, Jane Hennessy and her fellow classmates delve into the intricacies of bibliography, footnotes and minute details that make up the English research paper.

Turning publishers, journalism students edit a first faculty news letter. Above, Norman La Salle checks Richard Gazi's copy, Donna Magruder and Margaret Nealon stack dittoed pages, and Ramon Ballvé staples together finished copies.

LANGUAGE ARTS

Language Arts Seminar Boosts Cultural Interest

Changes in methods of play production, revision of the curriculum and remodeled reading labs led the innovations in the Language Arts Department. Mr. James Townsend initiated double casting in the fall play, The Heiress. Under the direction of Mrs. Mary Cunningham, a Language-Music-Art seminar succeeded in introducing to interested seniors the variety of cultural material in the Washington area. Renovated reading laboratories provided greater efficiency in effective reading.

English Department-sponsored writing and speaking contests gave all students the opportunity to submit classroom work for outside criticism and possible recognition or reward.

Lending a watchful eye, Mrs. Miller Vice supervises her students as they put samples of their writing on the bulletin board.

Examining Jeff Merwin's request, Miss Letitia Lam prepares to give him a pass to evening and Saturday library sessions.

LIBRARY

Library Admits Studios Two Nights Per Week

Changes made during the summer brought a "new look" to the library. Modern entrance, enlarged bulletin board and bookjackets displaying some of the seventeen hundred books purchased this year produced the transformation. Shelves presented a varied selection of recently acquired magazines.

Beginning in October, the library remained open from seven to nine on Tuesday and Thursday evenings and from nine to twelve on Saturday mornings. This enabled students to use the facilities more frequently and with greater convenience.

Under the direction of the staff, approximately fifty students learned to use the library audio-visual aids and became available to assist teachers requesting their help. During Book Week, November 12-18, the librarians arranged daily displays covering a wide range of subjects.

Via the card catalogue in the library, Linda Cochran locates a book for her English required reading list.

MUSIC

Singers, Musicians Give Gala Holiday Serenades

Students in the Music Department received full credit for their work this year for the first time. The action gave many who would have had to forego music classes the chance to fit choir, chorus, madrigals, or instrumental music into their schedules.

Selected from eleventh and twelfth grade singers, the choir participated in the World Fellowship Service at Washington Cathedral. While the choruses sang at school assemblies, the Madrigals again performed in area programs. Music festivals attracted the band and orchestra, which also played for school assemblies and programs.

Mrs. Florence Booker, chairman of the county and the school music departments, provided many opportunities for music students to attend concerts at Constitution Hall. Students supplemented classes by going to other area musical events.

Daily practice sessions of the Concert Band improve Bill Cornwell, Henry Townsend and Judy Wycoff.

Preparing for the Candlelight Concert, choir members Diane Cawes, Mary Rooter and Camile Almy practice.

Solid Geometry and Trig teacher, for advice in executing a formal geometric proof of a frustrating pacemaker problem.

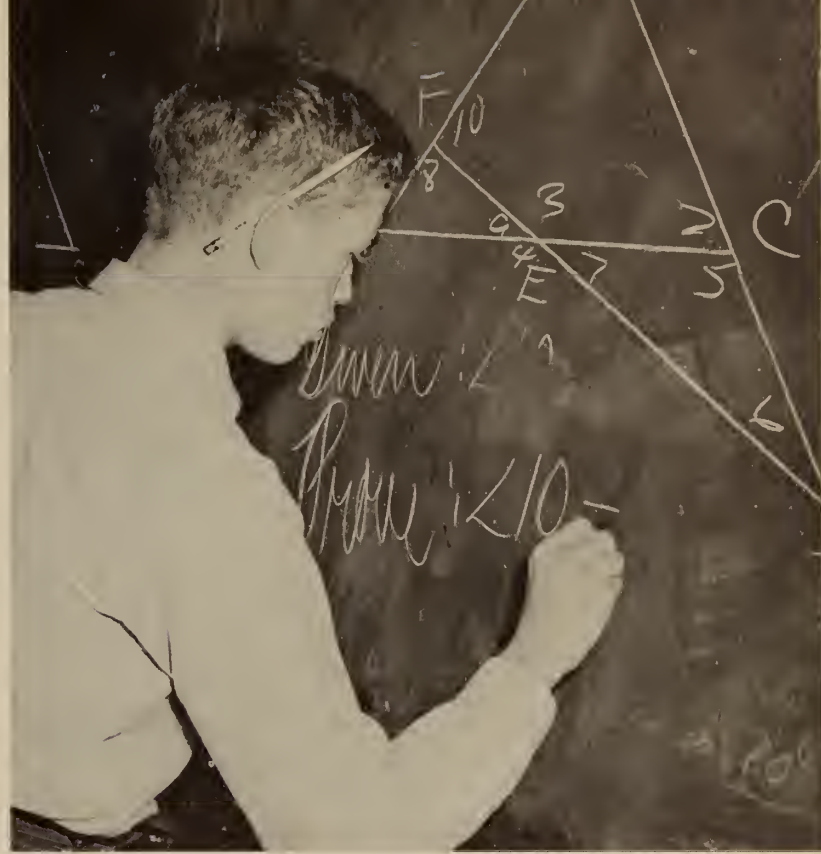

MATHEMATICS

Department Inaugurates Math Course for Seniors

Have you ever wanted to be a Wall Street broker or an IBM operator? Members of the Senior Mathematics Course discovered the basic principles of these jobs during the year. Students learned to plan vacation costs, budget clothing allowances and identify various types of insurance and their benefits. During the final days of school, each person planned his own financial program. Guest speakers lectured at different times, providing a change from the usual schedule of classroom studies.

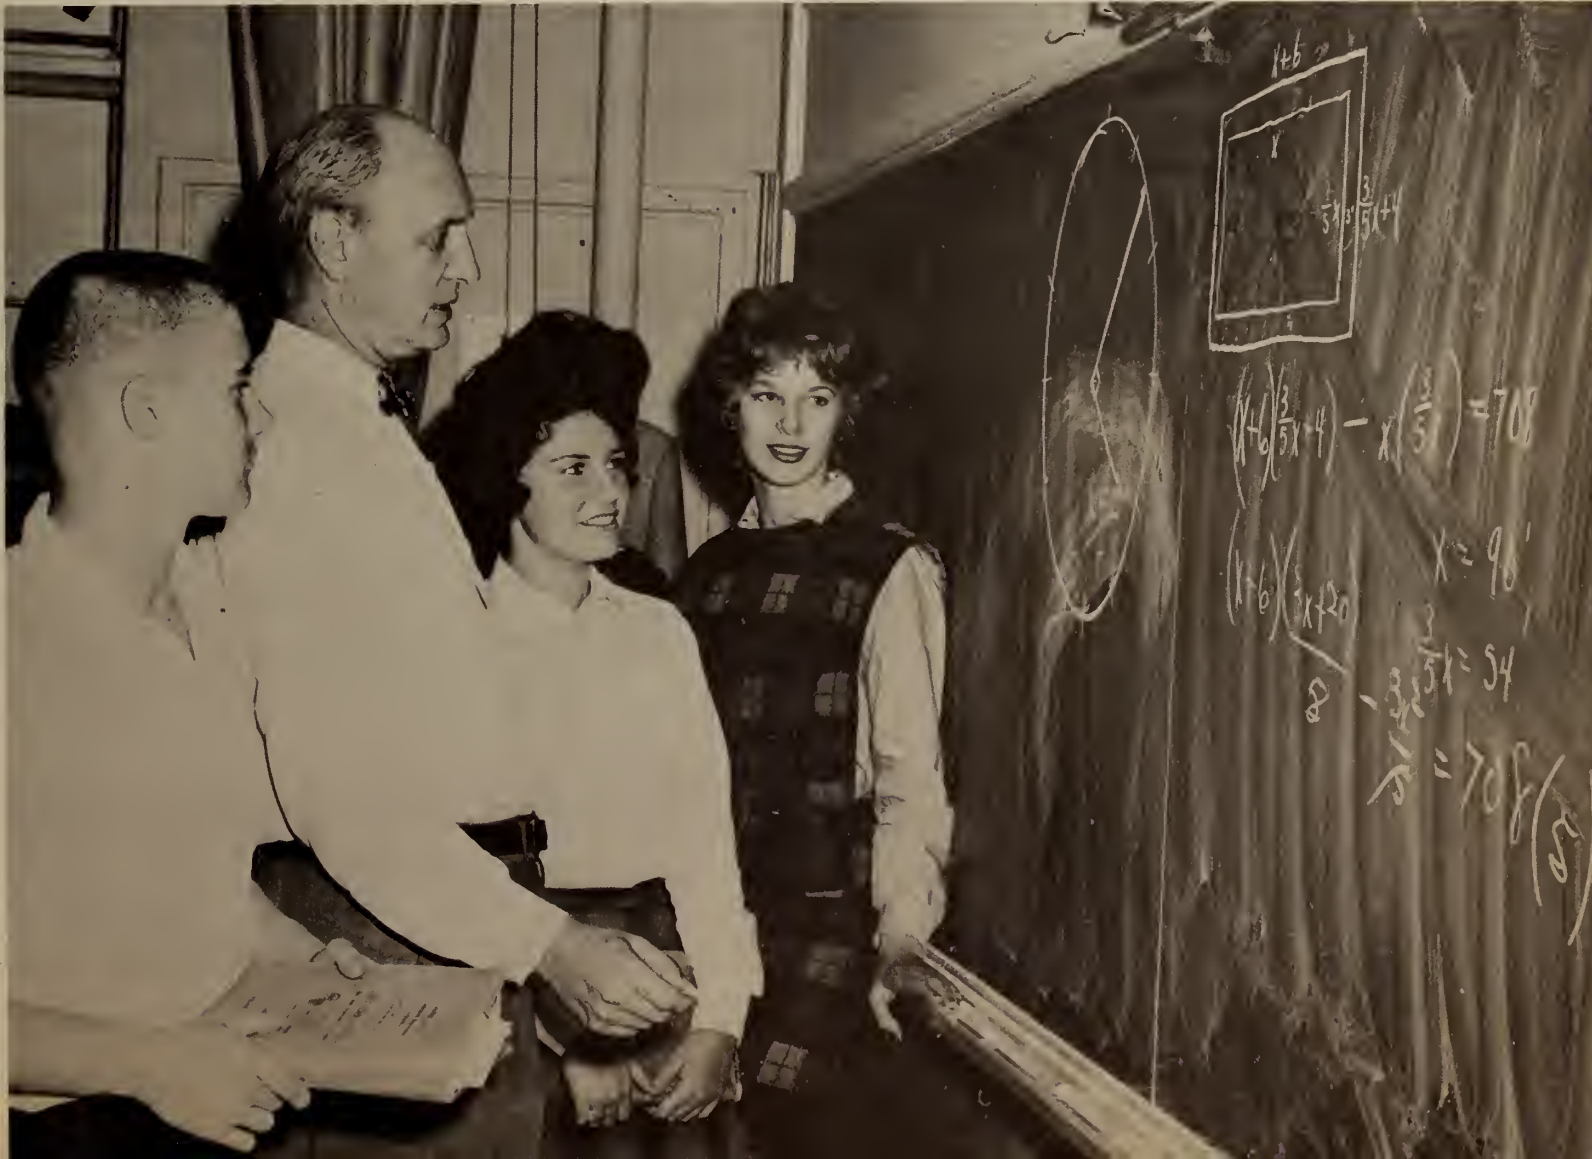

Keen competition arose between regular Plane Geometry Classes and the two using an experimental plan provided by the School Mathematics Study Group. A Comparison of the two teaching methods kept each group striving to surpass the other.

SCIENCE

Films, Pamphlets, Trips Enrich Scientific Studies

New textbooks, lab equipment and series of films by university professors marked this year's intensified physics class developed by the Physical Science Study Committee. An additional teaching device in the biology classes was the use of numerous pamphlets to supplement the textbooks.

Science students traveled to New York City to visit Hayden Planetarium and the Museum of Natural History. This was one of several field trips planned to broaden the curriculum.

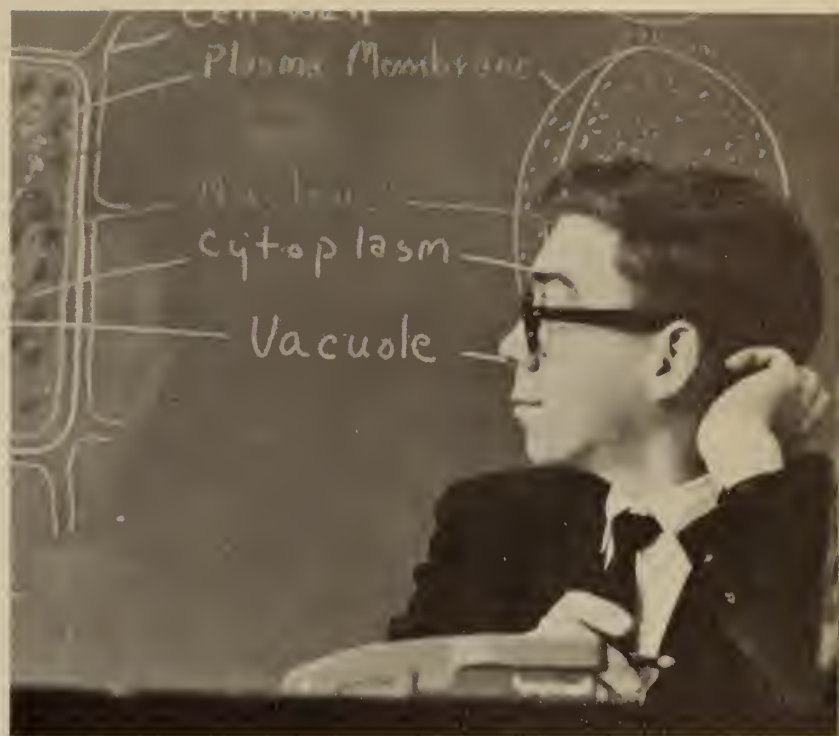

All science classes had the opportunity to hear a discussion of projects for the Science Fair. Topics reviewed included requirements for entry, ideas for projects and criteria for judging subject matter.

Peering down at a piece of rubber tubing, Joe Mashburn readies apparatus for an assault on physical laws.

"Hydra have legs," Ronnie Vetere explains as Joanne Gregg looks at water Mr. Allison Wells is dropping on the slide.

"Now what in the name of science is that?" broods physics teacher Mr. Charles Silver, pondering a diagram.

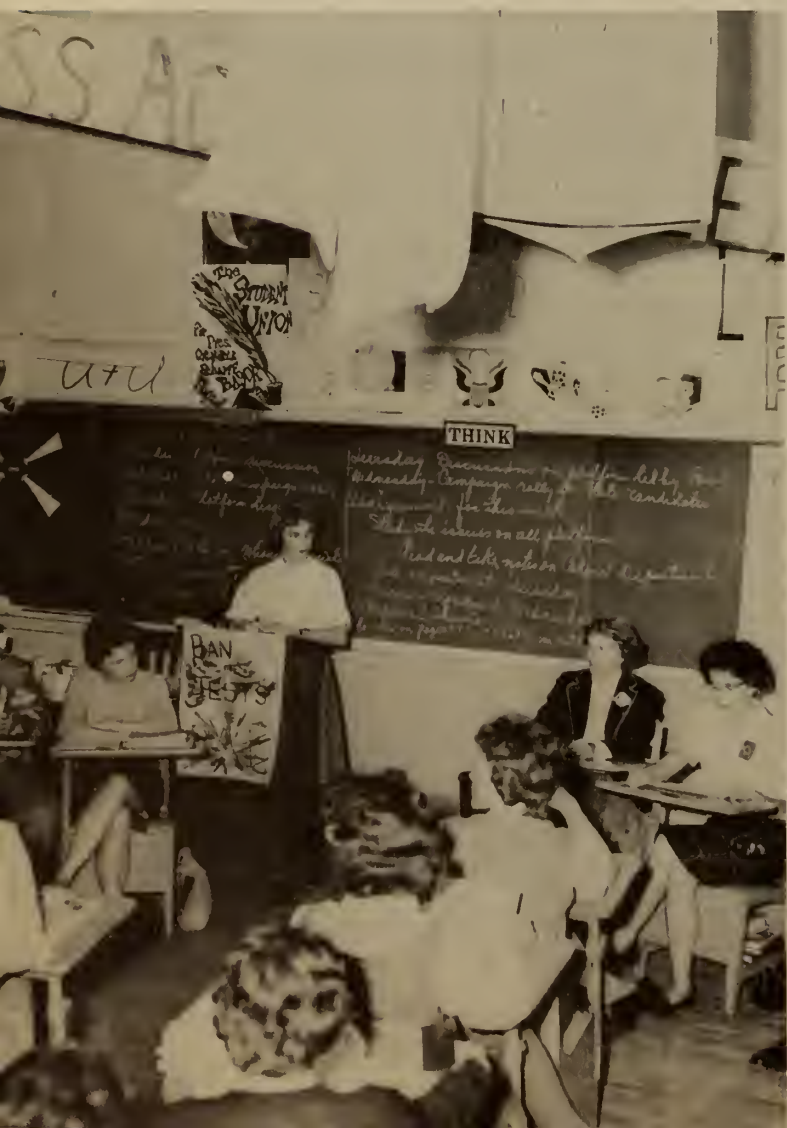

"Oh, it's a cell!" exclaims Mr. Silver. "It's really amazing what a person can find on blackboards nowadays."

Absorbed in mock campaign proceedings, Miss Sally Loving's government class debates party issues.

World news comes to life for social studies students during a discussion of current events presented by Priscilla Burns.

SOCIAL STUDIES

Seniors Compile Booklet For Department Library

If you had to do a research paper on man and the state, members of the Intensified Virginia and U. S. Government class eased your work with the addition of a booklet to the department library. This pamphlet presented views on the state and its relationship to man by twenty-three philosophers.

County-wide policy on showing the controversial "Operation Abolition," which deals with Communist infiltration in colleges, stemmed from the use of the movie in a government class. The School Board decision in favor of allowing the showing of the film to high school students came after a careful study of the material in the movie.

Participation in the Northern Virginia Discussion League, field trips and bulletin board displays gave the department a busy schedule.

World happenings in brief — Given class time to review information from the "American Observer" before a discussion in history, junior Nancy Cave studies articles concerning national problems and Turkey's domestic troubles.

Year of Competition Accomplished

Competition — winning scores, broken records, "sudden death" play-offs, all symbolize contests waged, a threshold crossed.

Cheerleaders' Activities

Fan School Enthusiasm

Pigskin identification stickers on football players' hall lockers, many colorful posters and banners in the halls, plus an abundance of enthusiasm served as evidence of the determined efforts of the Generals' dozen varsity cheerleaders.

Cheerleaders' organizational ability crystallized into many activities beginning with the formation of the Pep Club, a student group with a membership of two hundred. The club rooted for the Generals at their grid meets and presented a special card-flashing program for the Wakefield contest. Other important events on the Cheerleaders' busy agenda included Blue and Gray Day and the presentation of skits at pep rallies and assemblies.

Two nights a week of practice, often supplemented by Saturday work sessions, resulted in many of the new routines developed for the school year. Miss Jo Ann Williams, physical education teacher, acted as sponsor to the twelve girls, all with previous cheerleading experience.

Her face manifesting anxiety, cheerleader Janice Moody intently watches a play during the Thanksgiving game.

Generals Clinch Second in League Battle

Smashing through their first three games, the Generals disposed of Fairfax, Osbourn and Lee in quick succession. During the third game the General defense proved its mettle by holding the Lee squad at the five yard line for four downs before the General offense blanked the Lancers 21-0.

Yorktown's Patriots, entering the 1-A league for the first year, slapped the Generals with the only defeat of the season. Adding the O'Connell and Hammond teams to their victory list, the Generals went on to meet the then undefeated Atoms.

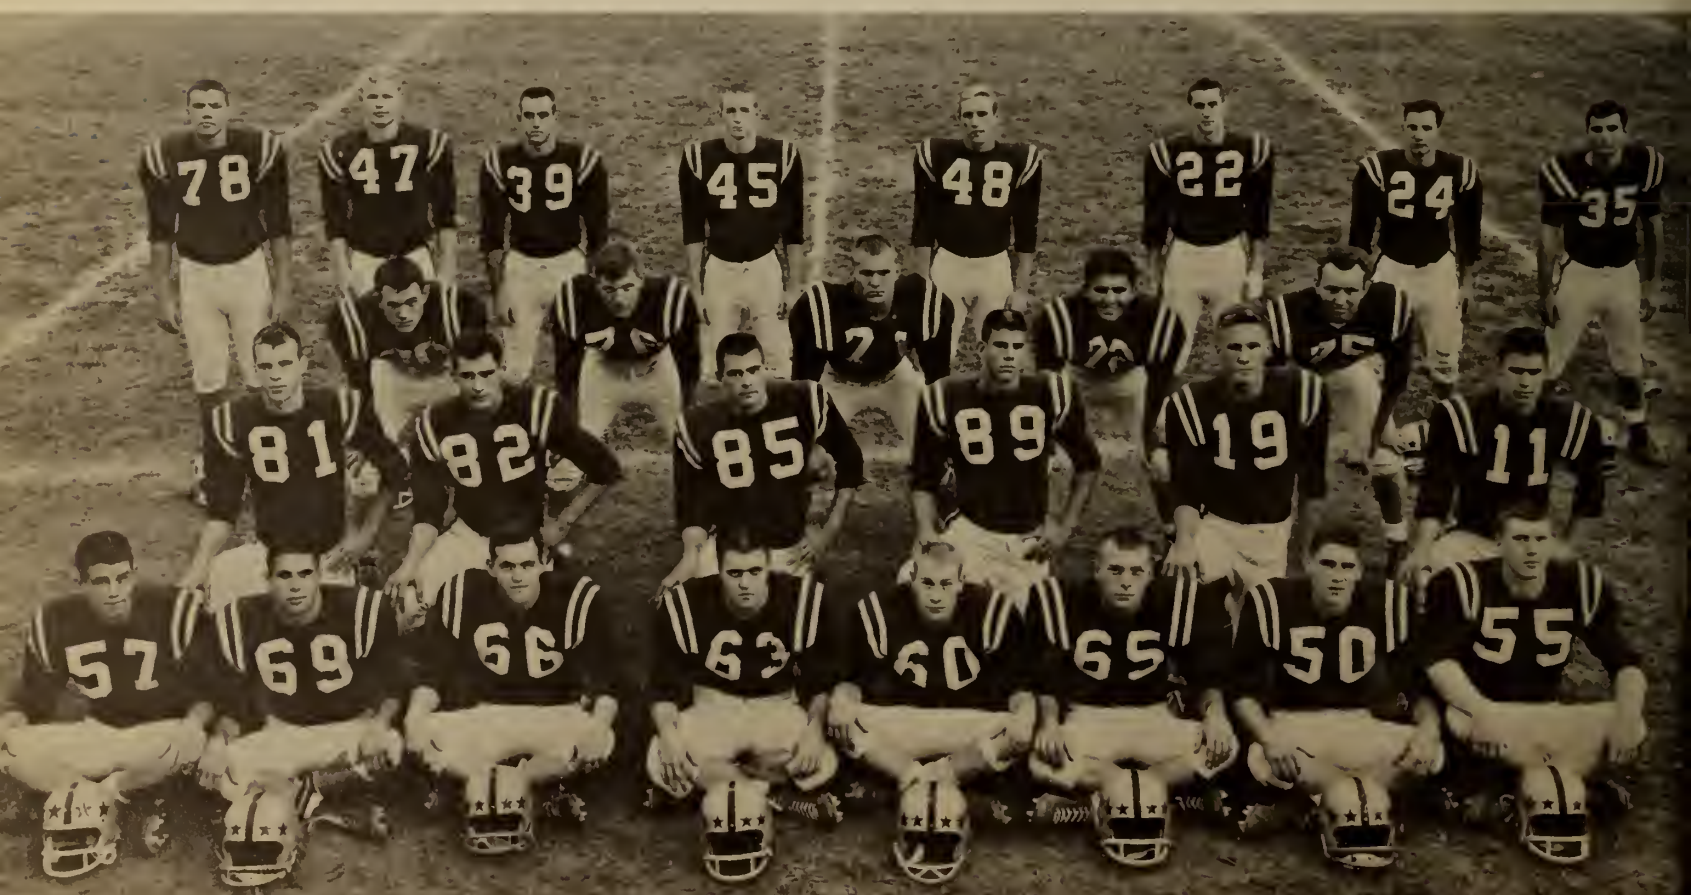

Defeating the Annandale squad 14-0, the Generals then whipped Jeb Stuart 26-0. Wakefield, the southside rival of Washington-Lee, also suffered a 19-7 defeat at their hands. This put the Generals' win-loss record at an impressive 8-1 before they went on to the traditional Thanksgiving day game.

Smiling broadly, the Generals's co-captains Archie Woody and Mike Marshman think back on a well-played football season.

Gridders Retire Second 'Oaken Bucket'

Closing their season with the annual Thanksgiving day game, the Generals clashed head on with the George Washington Presidents. Over six thousand spectators watched the traditional bout played for the twenty-sixth year. By the end of the first half, backs Tom LaManna and Vahan Khoyan had both crossed the Presidents' goal line and Sandy Anderson had scored the two extra points.

From then on the Generals stayed on top, winning the contest 14-7 to retire another "Old Oaken Bucket" after beating the Presidents for the third year in a row. The victory placed the gridders' win-loss record at 9-1 for the season.

Guided by co-captains Archie Woody and Mike Marshman plus a coaching staff of John Youngblood, Clarence Drayer, Roger Coggins and Boyd Webb, the 1961 gridders finished second in the league.

FOOTBALL TEAM MANAGERS — Seated: Will Crow. Kneeling: Charles Gardiner, Tom Edwards, David Shirley. Standing: Joe Gascon, Rich Hitch, Bill Anderson.

Head coach John Youngblood, who piloted the Generals to a 9-1 record, stands beside defense coach Roger Coggins, backfield mentor Boyd Webb and line coach Clarence Drayer who helped make the Generals' wins possible.

5-3 Record for Season

Starting the season with a 19-6 victory over Falls Church, the Baby Generals prepared to battle their rivals from Fairfax, whom they also defeated 34-12. Next the Jay Vees beat O'Connell 19-6 before going on to trounce Madison 26-0.

At this point the junior gridders ran into a three game losing streak caused mainly, according to Jay Vee coach Guy Cavallo, by injuries. Snapping out of it in time to whip Wakefield 14-6, the Baby Generals ended the season with a 5-3 record.

Marksman Sharpshoot Way to Top Place

High school rifle teams from Northern Virginia formed their own league in order to give the marksmen a regular schedule. The Generals bagged the first championship by out-shooting all the contenders in the organization. By firing successfully from three standard positions, senior Robert Wick copped top place in the scoring column.

New lights and a fresh coat of paint on the rifle range marked the improvements instituted by Mr. Albert Harringer in his first year as coach.

Squad Bags Virginia State Championship

For the first time in Washington-Lee's history, the basketball squad won the Virginia State Championship by successively defeating the three down-state teams of Marion, Andrew Lewis and Maury. The meet, held at Richmond, drew bus-loads of ardent General fans and boosters.

Regular season play was no less impressive. The hoopsters, playing Coach Morris Levin's style of close man to man defense until the opponent's weakness is spotted, won first place in league competition by closing the season with a 20-18 victory over George Washington in a game which lapped three minutes into overtime. The Generals, led by co-captains Ray Hodgdon and Bob Baughan, then outplayed McLean, Yorktown and Hammond in the 1-A league battle to clinch the Northern Virginia Championship. Hammond handed the team its only defeat, but the Generals came back to defeat the Admirals 42-28 in a later game. Ed Hummer, who scored 325 points, received the "Best Player" award.

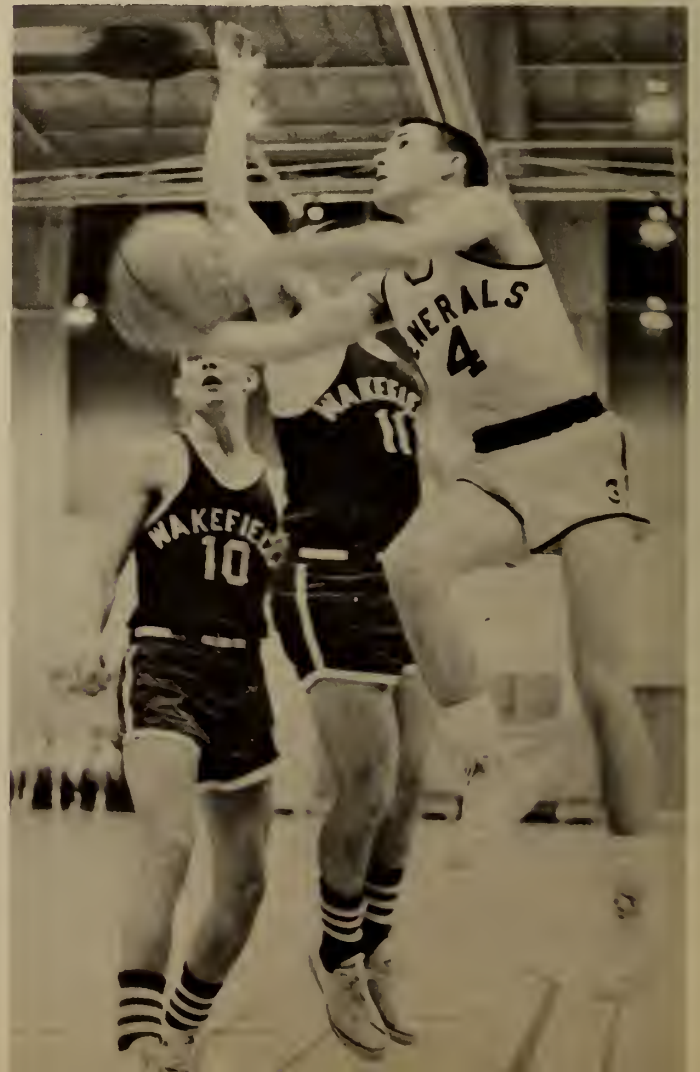

Evidence of a hard fought battle holds the attention of basketball co-captains Ray Hodgdon and Bob Baughan.

Sweeping past two Wakefield guards, Richie Scharff aims carefully for the Warrior basket before downing two points.

combined increased knowledge of area teams' tactics with the boys' steadily improving playing skills to clinch five triumphs in the last seven meets. The team, led by co-captains Bob Wright and Larry Kener, finished the season with an 8-10 record.

Competing on local fairways, six members of the Generals' 1961 Golf Team teed to second place in their league, losing only a heart-breaker dropped in the nineteenth hole to Fairfax. Coach Glenn Causy's boys then matched J. E. B. Stuart, winner of first place in Northern Virginia's other golfing league. The meet, which resulted in a General loss, placed the squad in number three berth for the entire area. The golfers finished the season by taking fourteenth in the state meet.

Co-captained by Brian O'Donnell and Vahan Khoyan and coached by Sherman Vandevender, the 1962 varsity wrestling team fought its way to a successful season and the area Championship.

Kicking off the wrestling year with a recruiting drive which featured a special assembly put on by returning wrestlers, the matmen continued to grapple through the season at a fast clip. Tabulations on league matches showed the Generals won a total of nine matches, tied one, and dropped one. Wakefield dealt the matmen their only league defeat, but the Blue and Gray returned to beat the Warriors in both a later bout and in the league crown competition, which the Generals won 79-78.

Undefeated through the season was Vahan Khoyan, who along with Jim Spicer won first place at the state championship in Norfolk.

Composed mainly of sophomores, the junior varsity wrestling team was plagued through the season by a lack of matmen in the heavy-weight divisions. Despite this burden, the squad recoiled from two early defeats to end with a 6-4 record.

Coached by Mr. Guido Cavallo, the junior mat-men clinched their first decision in the bout with Stuart, following this with another win over Falls Church. The grapplers then went on to win four of their last five matches. The 38-18 triumph over Yorktown, which had won the year's first bout, demonstrated the improvement.

Crew Skims Victoriously To Fifth National Title

Rough waters and high winds surrounded the National Schoolboy Rowing Championship held on the Potomac. Washington-Lee captured the trophy for the fifth consecutive year defeating Bonner, which had previously defeated the Generals at the Stotesbury Cup Regatta, and a field of four other squads.

Several losses throughout the season plagued the 1961 crew team, preventing them from journeying to England for the Henley Regatta. In the latter part of April and in early May, the oarsmen, co-captained by Bill Clineburg and Roger Olsen, lost meets to Brown, Georgetown and Princeton Universities and to the Kent School. However, the squad out-rowed all high school competitors including George Washington and Hammond to capture the Northern Virginia Championship.

Neither rain, nor sleet, nor snow—still game in spite of the chill and the wet, crew co-captain Van Waddell sweeps the dock.

As the coxwain yells "Stroke!" Gregg Wynn, John Jenkins and Allen Anderson all strain together to make the first

Racket Squad Bounces Into Area's Second Slot

After a total of nine matches, the 1961 varsity tennis team took second place in the Northern Virginia 1-A league. The netmen, under the direction of Mr. Edwin Sutton, squelched the Yorktown Patriots in the season opener. The squad then met a three game losing streak before beating Groveton 9-0. Wakefield spurned the Generals with a loss, but the players slammed their way to victory over George Mason and St. Stevens. This gave the team a scorecard of five wins and four losses.

Sluggers Corner Tournament Championship

Resolute on making a strong showing, co-captains Terry Brown and Richard Remigailo led their baseball squad into Alexandria's Municipal Stadium where they overcame the George Washington Prexies 4-2, the Fairfax Rebels 13-2 and the Lee Lancers 12-2. These victories gave the Generals the Northern Virginia Baseball Championship.

In regular league contests the players tied Lee and McLean for third berth with a 10-6 record. Coach Del Norwood's boys improved steadily throughout the year, particularly in fielding, which combined with its batting and pitching gave the team the power it needed. Ronnie Brooks and Clay Bittering received the "Best Player" awards.

His bat chosen, senior slugger Johnny Carroll firmly plants his feet to take a practice swing before facing the pitcher.

Feminine Athletes Turn Weekend Camping Fans

As if in an effort to comply with President Kennedy's request for stronger and healthier Americans, the Girls' Athletic Association reorganized to make activities available three days a week. Girls joined teams according to the day they could attend. On Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays, girls participated in basketball, volleyball, tennis, ping pong, trampoline, shuffleboard and softball on the home-courts while others bowled at the Skor-Mor Lanes on the other side of Quincy Street.

Washington-Lee's more active girls spent weekends in November and April camping in Prince William Forest, Maryland, and Winchester, Virginia. After participating in playdays with losses to Lucky and McLean High Schools, the G. A. A. sponsored a county-wide softball tournament at W-L.

Hoping to dislodge her adversary's disc, Judy Squires teams up with Colleen Davis during a shuffleboard duel.

Causey Assumes Reins Of Intramural Competition

Replacing Mr. Pat Kober, Mr. Glenn Causey stepped into control of the boys' intramural program. Activities began with games of touch football played by boys in all three grade levels. Sophomore and Junior team members came from their regular gym periods, while seniors competed each Wednesday afternoon after school.

Varied programs, including such sports as volleyball, basketball, ping-pong, wrestling, bowling, and softball provided the boys with an outlet for athletic endeavor on a sub-varsity level as well as activities for those not having time for full participation in a particular phase of athletics.

CROSSED SABRES

Managing, Copy Editors Increase Staff Efficiency

Taking over the helm of Crossed Sabres as editor-in-chief, the first male editor in thirteen years assumed command of the school paper and immediately inaugurated a staff reorganization.

Housed in the atmosphere of a recently equipped and remodeled office, the new staff included a managing editor, copy editor and staff secretary as well as the usual page editors.

Experimenting with one-line heads and a layout device humorously labeled "The Toy," everyone helped in planning more attractive pages.

In March, the group packed into their sponsor's red "fire engine" and traveled to New York City where they received their Medalist award.

Striving to make each paper better than its predecessor, Editor-in-Chief Marty Cooper checks the latest issue for any mistakes.

PENMAN

Penman Offers Popcorn At Home Ball Games

"Popcorn, get your fresh, hot popcorn!" urged the members of the Penman staff. This cry resounded at all home football and basketball games during the year, as members earned enough additional funds to enable the cost of the magazine to be lowered twenty-five cents per issue.

In order to increase sales, the Penman staff organized their drive through the homerooms rather than the English classes. Elected representatives collected subscriptions and sold the three seasonal issues of the literary magazine.

The staff also offered the Student Directory to the school at a price reduced from last year's. For those students not purchasing subscriptions or Student Directories, the school store offered both publications for sale before and after school.

Editing page proofs, Mrs. Patricia Grafton, sponsor, and Elin Gammon, editor, correct flaws before returning the copy.

STUDENT COUNCIL Council Organizes Drive For Central Library Fund

Constitutional changes affecting the student forum, the club program and the method of electing S.C.A. officers busied council members in the fall. The three amendments provided that a candidate for office must present a statement of interest, that the activity council would be changed to the activity forum and that the student council would call meetings of the student forum whenever necessary for the discussion of important business.

For the first time, the council sponsored club mixers at the beginning of the year and innovated the selection of the club of the quarter. At the end of the year the council chose the club of the year from the quarterly winners.

Enlisting the aid of clubs and classes, the student council also coordinated the school-wide drive for the Central Library's book fund.

Previous to the ratification of the Student Council constitution, Secretary Barbara Veno clips together stacks of ballots.

Sophomore Senators Rachel Lewis and Sandra Slade prepare to take their places at a council meeting.

Taking their work seriously comes naturally to junior Senators Jack Lowery and Tron Brekke.

Checking the advertisements in the football programs constitutes just one of the many jobs of Treasurer Marty Graves.

Serving as the voices for the seniors in the Student Council, Senators Sue Van Leunen and John Phillips await the president's arrival.

ORCHESTRA

Orchestra's Performance Entrances Sixth Graders

Clear strains of a violin wavered in the air as spellbound Arlington sixth graders listened to a Washington-Lee orchestra program which emphasized the function each instrument performed in achieving group harmony. At the performance, the musical body divided itself into the traditional categories of strings, wood winds, brass and percussion to acquaint the audience with the instruments, tones and versatility of each section.

Acting as a semi-independent group similar to the other Music Department organizations, the orchestra elected a student government which maintained order. During rehearsals the musicians responded to the motions of student leaders substituting for Miss Dorothy Baumle, director.

Traditional seasonal music assemblies continued throughout the year. The orchestra also participated in the Civil War Centennial program with other county musical organizations, featuring spirited marches from the late eighteen hundreds.

Instrumentalists Perform At Civil War Centennial

Invited by the Civil War Centennial Commission, the Concert Band joined with other county music departments to present a commemoration program in October. Later, the band accompanied the majorettes in their halftime routine at the January U. S. Bowl at the District of Columbia Stadium.

After Christmas the band participated in the Northern Virginia music competition. Fourteen members, selected on the basis of auditions, went on to the All-State convention at J.E.B. Stuart High School. Later in the year in order to finance the department's music library, the Concert Band presented its traditional Spring Concert.

PEP BAND

Strains of William Tell

Accompany Pep Songs

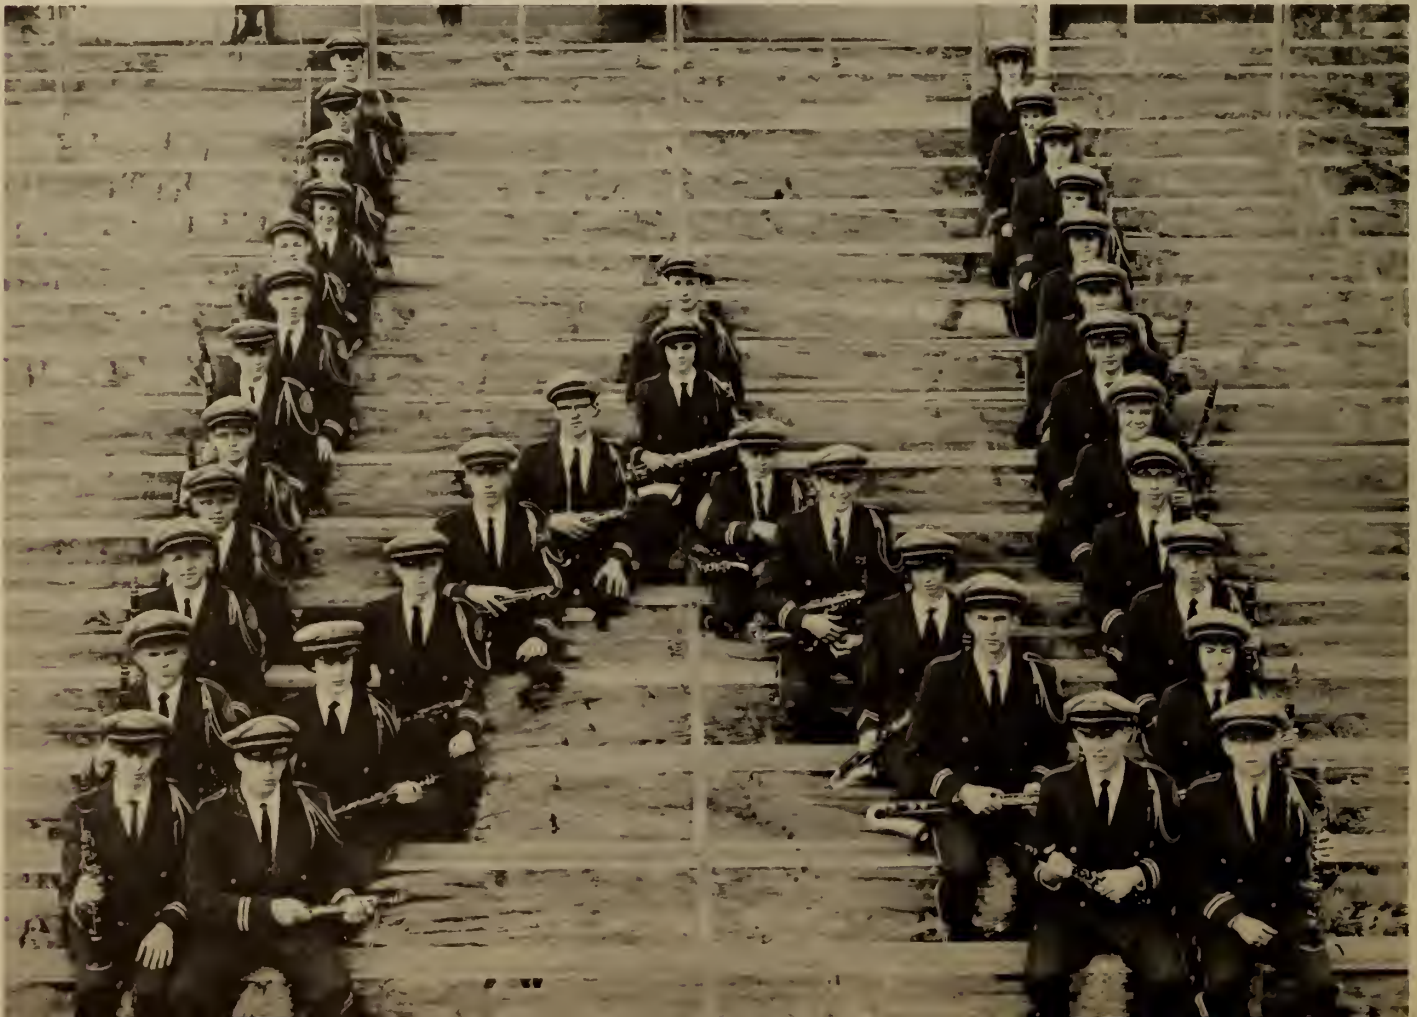

"Don't forget, it's thumbs up for 'Dixie,' a closed fist for 'Shine,'" reminded the director of the Pep Band just before the first football game of the season. In an attempt to improve communication between the band and the cheerleaders during pep rallies and basketball and football games, the two groups inaugurated a signals system that simplified the selection of songs.

Unlike the former marching band the musicians did not parade while playing, but continued to select unusual numbers such as the overture to the opera William Tell to accompany cheers.

CHOIR

Inner Choir Trills Echo, Serves as Semi-Chorus

Descants and echoes resounded from the twenty-five voices in the Inner Choir. The members of the group, drawn from the choir, sang portions of musical works requiring a semi-chorus, as in Mendelsson's Cantata sung at the Candlelight Concert.

The one hundred voice choir helped to commemorate the Civil War Centennial through a musical program presented at Washington-Lee in the fall, featuring melodies popular during that era. In late November, they sang for the Adult Education Association of the United States during their convention at the Sheraton-Park Hotel. The choir also participated in the seasonal school assemblies.

John Phillips, Choir President, plans the singers' agenda for the month during an executive board meeting after school.

MIXED CHORUS

Officers Police Singers During Choral Practices

"Zing Went the Strings of My Heart," an Appalachian love song and a musical fable all spelled diversity for the Mixed Chorus, who sought the unusual in their musical selections. A haunting Puerto Rican Christmas carol contrasted sharply with the lilting melody about the mouse who spent his life gnawing at a sturdy oak tree.

Two student directors, officers and section leaders served as an executive board which guided the actions of the singers in class and during rehearsals. Mr. Robert Baxter, chorus director, commented that the experience in self-governing aided the seventy-five percent of the group who graduated into the Washington-Lee choir.

Area junior high school students learned of musical opportunities at Washington-Lee in programs presented at Stratford and Swanson. The chorus featured songs from the Spring Concert.

MADRIGALS

Madrigals Sing Ballads For Foreign Collegians

Christmas holidays held a myriad of activities for the Madrigals. Appearing at the State Department Press Auditorium, the singers performed for foreign college students. Notable figures, including Mrs. Dean Rusk, wife of the Secretary of State, and embassy officials appeared for the program. The group also entertained at the International Center in Washington at neighboring country clubs and at various churches throughout the area.

Previously including only English ballads in their repertoire, the Madrigals added Italian and French Renaissance songs as well as contemporary musical collections to their programs.

ELOS

Artistic Members Present

Evening Talent Display

Applying the talents which gained them admission to the society, members of Elos presented an evening program which included paintings, sketches, songs and instrumental numbers. Those in choral groups sang several selections, while those in the band and orchestra played their instruments. Artists in the group gave a show, as the publication staff members handled all publicity.

Exhibiting the talent that won her admission to Elos, Sandy Stewart plays her violin at the society's Review.

French Drama Finances Library Additions

For the first time in several years, members of the French Honor Society presented a French drama, Alfred de Musset's "On ne badine pas avec l'amour," or "One Must Not Trifle With Love." Gathering the cast from try-outs among third and fourth year French students, the honor society also enlisted the aid of the Thespians for technical assistance in the production. Profits from the play financed the purchase of French books.

Cosmopolitan activities enjoyed by members included viewing French films and dining at Washington restaurants specializing in French cuisine.

LATIN HONOR SOCIETY

Mycenaean Civilization

Impresses Latin Society

Mycenaean culture came vividly alive to members of the Latin Honor Society who listened to Mr. Allen Mac Donald, faculty member at George Washington University, explain the ancient civilization. Films and slides recreated the ruins at Greece and Rome for the linguists.

Required Latin help sessions offered a refresher course for several club members who had been away from the language for a year or two. Students' questions temporarily baffled the scholars to whom fourth declension noun patterns and ut result clauses sounded quite foreign.

Slide Rule Classes Assist Science Students

Seeing the light under Pam Schweickhardt's guidance, Jim Mrazek takes advantage of a science help session.

Slide rule laboratories, designed to aid math and science students, were held for the first time this fall by the Science Honor Society. Through the after school sessions the course's participants learned to use the mathematical short cuts which a slide rule offers to the user.

In the fall, a constitutional revision allowed new members to vote for the president and vice president by setting a new time for elections.

To finance a fifty dollar scholarship for an outstanding science student, the honor group sold refreshments at all home football games.

SPANISH HONOR SOCIETY

Society Acquires Books To Increase References

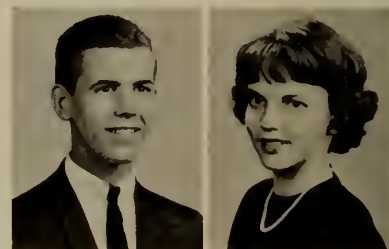

Organizing a library of literature and grammar books for the use of interested Spanish students, the Spanish Honor Society sought to interest those not in need of help sessions. From September to June society members led special study periods held on Tuesday afternoons so they would not conflict with regular meetings of the organization.

Besides presenting the annual play to all Spanish classes in March, the society made trips into Washington to hear a lecture given by the "Club de las Americas" at the Chamber of Commerce Building and to visit a Spanish children's book fair.

Eagerly delving into new books, seniors Karen Campbell and Pete Culbert explore the Spanish references.

GWETA Drive Embarks With Bureau's Donation

Speakers' Bureau, the first student organization to purchase membership in the Greater Washington Educational Television Association, instituted a drive to interest other groups in joining. Members also gave panel discussions in support of the station and the concept of educational television at P.T.A.'s and other civic associations.

In order to raise funds to copyright the annual "How to Study" skit usually presented to sophomores, the Bureau sponsored shows featuring Mrs. F. P. Anderson and her "Cultured Cottontails."

THESPIANS

Dramatists Initiate Apprenticeship System

Aspiring actors and actresses joined a troupe of Thespian apprentices at the open house held early in the year. Under the revised induction system each society member directed a group of the candidates during play workshops and rehearsals. The sponsors then presented promising apprentices to the society to be selected for membership.

In their first play of the year, Thespians presented The Heiress, a work adapted from Henry James's Washington Square. In the winter months the artists aided the French Honor Society in the production of its play "On ne badine pas avec l'amour" by Alfred de Musset. On the heels of this production came the spring production.

Six outstanding journalists from the staffs of Blue and Gray, Crossed Sabres and Penman scheduled projects for Quill and Scroll, the journalism honor society. One of these, a press conference, assembled editors of area school publications together to discuss their work. Later in the year, writers-to-

Two inductions added up-and-coming journalists to the society. Mrs. Pearl Hanson, sponsor, held a celebration dinner at her home.

ALPHA TRI-HI-Y

Alpha Eleven Triumphs In Tri-Hi-Y Grid Contest

Thirteen jersey-shirted, cleat-shod Alpha Tri-Hi-Y members met an opposing Sigma team in the first female football game in Washington-Lee's history. Scoring an upset over Sigma 20 to 0, Alpha donated forty dollars from its ticket profits to the Arlington County Library Drive.

With funds raised from an after-dance and other activities, Alpha joined the Greater Washington Educational Television Association in support of the new station. The club also sponsored an exchangee from Manhasset, New York, and presented a fashion show in the early spring.

Almost tagged, Sigma Sue Thompson spurts away from the out-stretched hand of Alpha tackle Virginia Bateman.

BETA CLUB

Aid to Disabled Veteran Enhances Beta Charities

Stubborn float drivers, ponderous entries and spirited contestants complicated the life of Beta Club members at the traditional November Bonfire. In addition, traffic snarls and floats, over-turned because of low clearance under trees, added further confusion to the night by having to be quickly untangled and repaired.

Continuing throughout the year, Beta's less hectic, but much needed charitable efforts aided many persons. The club sold tuberculosis stamps, collected canned goods for the needy, furnished clothing for a disabled veteran and aided at a center for the District's mentally handicapped children.

"Every person should know about cancer," states Mr. Norman G. Schmidt of the Cancer Association to assembled Betas.

Beta Tri-Hi-Y Provides Cheer for D. C. Orphans

Underprivileged children at Junior Village, a Washington home for orphaned children, anxiously awaited the visits of Beta Tri-Hi-Y girls who during the year, brought them toys and clothes purchased from the club's treasury funds.

When Christmas arrived, Beta members filled baskets for needy Arlington families with food they brought from home. As another holiday activity, the girls volunteered for work at the Arlington County Post Office. Here they sold Christmas Seals and handmade articles offered for sale by community

DEBATE CLUB

Debate Hopefuls Battle For Positions on Team

"Therefore, if that point is true, my program would surely be the better plan," concluded one of Washington-Lee's debators-to-be during his trial debate. Since the membership of the debating club had doubled since last year, Colonel Carl Brose, coach, held tryouts within the club to determine who would represent the school in area tournaments. Applicants became debators on the basis of their poise and style of delivery.

Full-day debate sessions at George Mason High School, the University of Virginia and George Washington University gave the team an opportunity to argue the pros and cons of federal aid to education. In addition to these conventions, the group took part in encounters with other schools in the Northern Virginia district every Monday.

Research files set up by debators assist Dick Bierman and President Peter Reichard in preparing for an area tournament.

Young Patriots Present Indians with U. S. Flag

As a patriotic education project, the Children of the American Revolution traveled to the Mattaponi Indian Reservation, one of the last remaining in Virginia. There, members presented a fifty-star flag to the chief who boasts of being a direct descendant of Powhatan.

Sharing his experiences with the group, Mr. Dean Brundage, Supervisor of Night School at the University of Virginia extension, spoke on the subject, Landmarks of Virginia History and Liberty. Later in the year the Thanksgiving program became more meaningful as the club members listened to the observations of a Cuban refugee who explained her escape and compared her new-found freedom in America with the way of life she had known before.

Chief of the Mattaponi Indians admires the new American flag which members presented to him on their trip.

DISTRIBUTIVE EDUCATION CLUB Student Workers Treat Employers at Hogate's

Sea food platters at Hogate's marked the end of an educational school year and also one of much travel for Distributive Education Club members. In addition to the dinner, the Employer-Employee Banquet featured a guest speaker and later the presentation of contest awards and a citation for the "Outstanding Student of 1961-1962."

Club activities offered other opportunities to members. Aside from their Tuesday night meetings where a variety of speakers introduced current business methods, members participated in such educational programs as field trips to local business concerns, an excursion to Roanoke for a Distributive Education Club contest and a spring tour of New York markets to see big business in action.

DELTA TRI-HI-Y Social Events Brighten Delta's Welfare Projects

Lending variety to their activities, Delta Tri-Hi-Y combined an effective service program with occasional social events. During the pre-Christmas weeks, the girls stuffed animals for Arlington Hospital children. Later the Delta girls volunteered for service at the Tuberculosis Center.

With the adoption of an orphan, Delta girls pooled efforts with Lambda Hi-Y and presented an After-Dance following the Wakefield game as a moneymaking project for his support.

Purely social was the picnic given in the fall to welcome new members and the spaghetti dinner enjoyed by the group at their mid-year meeting.

ETA HI-Y Santa Visits Orphanage During Christmas Party

With a merry "Ho, ho, ho," Eta Hi-Y's Santa Claus distributed gifts to Washington orphans at a Christmas party. Club members purchased the children's gifts which Vahan Khoyan in the guise of Old Saint Nick happily gave out.

In the weeks prior to the Christmas party, Eta members worked weekends and after school to complete their float entry for the Bonfire. After Christmas, members viewed a movie depicting character development and helped in a clothing drive to supply wearing apparel for needy families.

FUTURE HOMEMAKERS OF AMERICA Faculty Enjoys Cuisine At Homemaker's Party

Entering into the Christmas spirit, members of the Future Homemakers of America served as hostesses at a holiday tea given for the faculty. During the club meetings prior to Christmas, the homemakers prepared a variety of cookies, candies and cakes to be served at the party. The cuisine attracted faculty gourmets who returned for seconds and thirds during conference and planning periods.

Throughout the year, the future homemakers offered a quick before-school snack for those students who, in their haste, had skipped breakfast. With the money from this project, the group purchased baking supplies for their teas and parties.

FUTURE TEACHERS OF AMERICA
Future Teachers Prepare
 Baked Goods for P. T. A.

Marble cake and the aroma of chocolate chip cookies created by the Future Teachers of America enticed members of the Parent-Teachers Association to purchase the various baked goods offered. Profits made from these bake sales provided a small scholarship for a graduating member of the club planning to attend college.

Movies, speakers and observations in actual classrooms served to familiarize the prospective teachers with educational conditions that they would encounter. After adequate preparation in the winter, the club members visited elementary school classes in the spring to study techniques used by instructors. Following each visit, a question and answer period enabled the students to discuss the procedures.

GAMMA TRI-HI-Y Viet Nameese Diplomat Speaks to Gamma Girls

Starting their year with a "Get-Acquainted" slumber party in September, Gamma Tri-Hi-Y members highlighted the fall months with trips to Constitution Hall to view a Rodgers and Hammerstein Concert and the Nutcracker Ballet.

Speeches on a number of topics, such as the address given by Mr. Fran Van Dink, a diplomat from Viet Nam, informed the girls about current international problems. Visits to local churches during the second semester provided an opportunity for a broader religious education.

Demonstrating good citizenship, Gamma girls sold Christmas Seals during the holidays, aided the Tuberculosis Center in its annual campaign and encouraged citizens to vote on election day.

HALL MONITORS

Hall Monitors Conduct Messenger Bureau

“Being a hall monitor combines all the duties of a well-run messenger service with that of an information bureau,” exclaimed a student who exchanged a first period study hall for a chair on the second floor labeled Monitor Station 201.

In addition to inspecting passes of those legitimately in the halls, monitors questioned guilty looking individuals who, minus the white slips, claimed to be checking in or out of school.

Answering repeatedly the question, “What time does the period end?” or running an errand for a nearby teacher saved hall monitors from boredom.

Tardy Buses Create Attendance Problems

Bus drivers without buses and buses without air in their tires caused consternation in the attendance office as throngs of tardy students swarmed down on the room. On a cold February morning all county school vehicles had flat tires, causing an estimated three hundred homeroom absences.

Providing excuses for the onslaught of tardy W-Lites occupied all of first and second periods.

Thirty students gave up their study halls to perform necessary attendance duties such as filing and collecting attendance slips. Also helping after school, club members recorded absences.

Club members acted as hosts at the International Center in the District of Columbia. In addition to acting as guides, they also played games and mingled with the foreign visitors at social events.

Key Club Float Secures Top Honors in Contest

Thousands of napkins and miles of wire in the form of a gigantic football captured first prize for the Key Club in the Beta Bonfire float contest. Boys working under secrecy to hide the unique idea from other organizations put over three hundred man hours into the project.

In order to raise funds for the Kiwanis Club, Key Club members sold peanuts in Clarendon to passers-by. The Kandy Kane Ball held in the Campbell Gymnasium during the Christmas season contributed the bulk of the club's treasury.

Visually improving the appearance of the War Memorial Stadium, the Key Club undertook the project of painting a section of bleachers on the visitors' side. As another school service, the club directed traffic in the student parking lot.

Metallic click-clacks echoed throughout the Kappa Tri-Hi-Y meeting as members brandished knitting needles to produce sweaters and socks. From the needlework sessions, the girls proceeded to selling candy Thursday's after school and sponsoring a basketball after-dance.

Returning for the Thanksgiving assembly, graduates found a lounge in the home economics wing re-decorated for their use by Kappa, which also gave an alumni tea after the Turkey Day football game. Early in December the club prepared colorful favors as Christmas presents for Arlington Hospital patients. Later, welcoming posters and a pizza party greeted Kappa's "adopted" Manhasset exchangee. Their Royal Highnesses the King and Queen of Twist, who earned their title after demonstrating their proficiency at dancing, provided the atmosphere for the Lambda Hi-Y after-dance following the Wakefield basketball game. Co-sponsored with Nu and Delta Tri-Hi-Y's, after-dances held in the gymnasium during the football and basketball season netted Lambda more than one hundred dollars. Part of the money went to buy games for the Arlington YMCA, while the remainder helped to support the Hi-Y's Foreign Service, a program designed to found Hi-Y's in other countries.

Library Displays Replace Book Week Tea

Abandoning the customary Book Week tea, Library Club arranged a daily display of books and pamphlets which highlighted the recent additions to the bookshelves. Later in the year, the club presented an assembly celebrating Library Week.

Meeting on Tuesdays, the library assistants and interested students heard speakers discuss various phases of literature. At other sessions, the members bound and repaired torn books and received instruction about operating slide projectors.

Using the fees charged for after-school services, the boys also handled much of their repair work in the storage room behind the Little Theater.

MAJORETTES

High Stepping Twirlers Parade at All-Star Bout

State Champion Twirler Anne Pierce led the largest group of majorettes in several years as they brandished their flags and fire torches at featured events during the year. By special invitation, they appeared with the marching band at the first U. S. College All-Star Game and the opening of District Stadium, executing several precision drills to the martial tunes of the band.

Pint-sized addition to the majorettes, Elaine Pierce served as team mascot. She came to the group at the beginning of the year and performed in many of their routines.

By request the girls also appeared in the annual George Washington parade at Alexandria. As a tangible reward for their baton twirling at school affairs, the majorettes received recognition at the sports banquet in the early part of November.

Seventeen mathematically-minded young men delved into the mysteries of symbolic logic, Cartesian geometry using oblique axes and non-euclidean geometry during the year. Members of the Mathematics Club presented discussions on concepts not ordinarily covered in high school level math courses. Problems following the lectures gave club members an opportunity to apply the theories they had discussed to practical situations.

Among the year's projects, the Mathematics Club and Tikos co-sponsored a gambling assembly featuring Dr. Blanche, an expert in probability and chance, who emphasized the impossibility of beating the odds forever. The boys also joined with Tikos to host an exchange from the Mathematics Department of Manhasset High School, New York.

Nu Taps Peace Corps for Assembly Talk

"Some will make it and some won't," remarked speaker Mr. Blair Butterworth at the Peace Corps assembly sponsored by Nu Tri-Hi-Y. Using stories of personal experiences, Mr. Butterworth informed students about the corps and then answered questions during a special period after the program.

In addition to rebuffing jokes about their name, members organized bake sales, collected toys for orphans at Junior Village, made a float for the George Washington game and sponsored a dance with Lambda Hi-Y after the Wakefield basketball game. The club placed all proceeds from funds-raising activities into Nu Tri-Hi-Y scholarship fund.

MOUNTED GENERALS

World Equestrian Show Lures Riding Enthusiasts

Swooping down on the Wakefield Warriors, the Mounted Generals led a spirited chase on the grid-iron during halftime. Atop steeds rented from the Bar-J Riding Academy, riders representing Washington-Lee succeeded in capturing the members of their club posing as Indians from Wakefield.

Increased interest in horseback riding during the past year tripled the enrollment of the Mounted Generals and enabled the club to enlarge its curriculum. Activities featured a fall field trip to the International Horse Show in Washington, D. C., and included weekly riding sessions at the Bar-J in Vienna. Not even Christmas vacation halted their excursions as members got into the holiday spirit with a hay ride through the countryside.

PENMAN ART CLUB

Painters Come to Life for Art Enthusiasts

Artist Vincent Van Gogh "visited" meetings of the Penman Art Club and spoke about his life and paintings. Through movies other artists also came alive and explained their ideas on the classical, impressionistic and cubistic styles of art. Representatives from area commercial art departments and a student from the International School of Interior Design also spoke to the group.

Every third Tuesday art enthusiasts visited art and architecture galleries. In the spring they packed up their easels, charcoal, paints and brushes and moved outdoors to sketch.

Illustrating stories for the Penman, submitting designs for the cover and designing posters to advertise its sales occupied club members for weeks before students purchased the literary magazine.

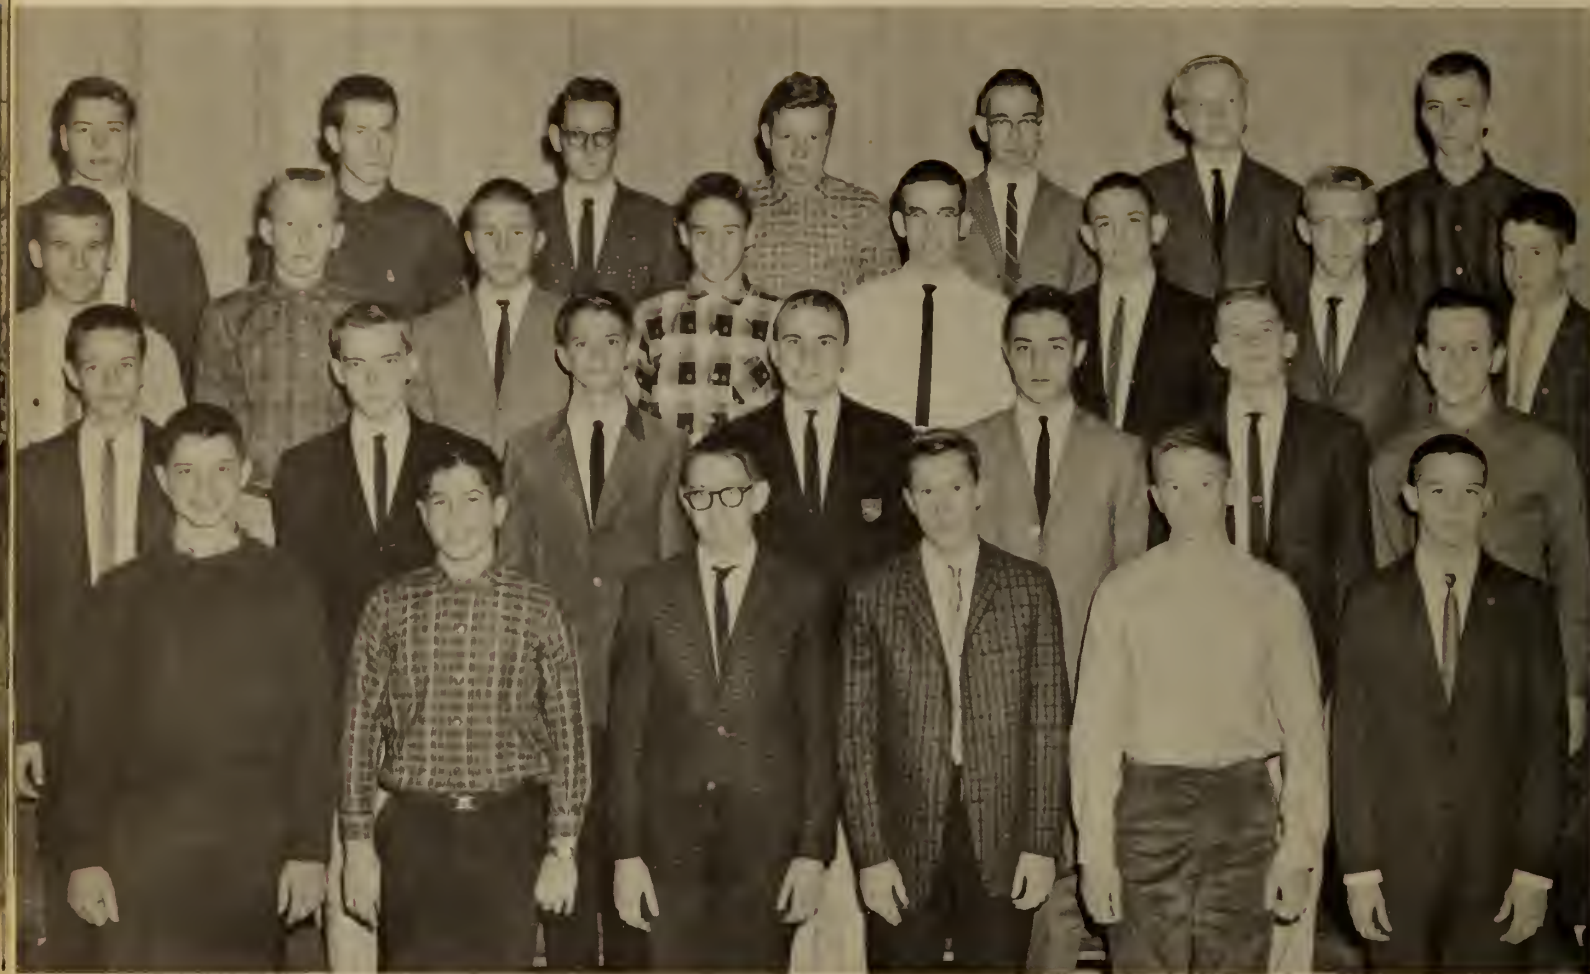

"This one's mine," avers Nancy Burke to fellow Penman artist Phil Landry as they admire the first issue's illustrations.

PHI HI-Y Phi Conducts Campaign To Help Needy Youths

On February 12, members of Phi Hi-Y launched a campaign for the "Save the Children Federation," which enlisted the help and cooperation of the entire school. After collecting the clothes which students placed in conveniently located boxes in the halls, club members sent them to the Federation headquarters in Connecticut.

Club members also ushered at choral concerts during the year and sponsored a dance with Gamma Tri-Hi-Y during the early spring.

"The kids will really appreciate this," ponders Phi member Ellis Cohn as he investigates the contribution box's contents.

PSYCHOLOGY CLUB

Club Members Turn Child Psychologists

Drawing on childhood diversions ranging from "I Spy" to "Pick Up Sticks," Psychology Club members entertained restive youngsters confined at D. C. General Hospital. Members volunteered their services once a month for duty in the children's ward and at the Retarded Children's Center. Here the future psychologists studied the needs and behavior of the mentally handicapped child.

Police Detective Robert Cox from the Narcotics Squad and a special agent for the Federal Bureau of Investigation spoke to the Psychology Club on the effects of narcotics and modern criminology respectively. Dr. Frances Reisenman, a psychiatrist at St. Elizabeth's Hospital, presented an interesting demonstration and explanation of clairvoyancy.

RESCUE SQUAD

Squad's Service Gleans Club of Quarter Award

Semper fidelis described the Rescue Squad's work during the year. Attending all athletic events, directing fire and air raid drills and supervising Civil Defense measures in the school won the group the coveted Club of the Quarter Award.

During the fall, the squad attended the International Rescue and First Aid Convention at Roanoke, Virginia. Here they participated in mock rescue operations, first aid contests and discussions over new techniques with amateurs and professionals from the United States and provinces of Canada.

RUSSIAN CLUB

Wakefield, W-L Co-Sponsor Russian Club

Since Wakefield had no Russian Club, Warriors invaded Washington-Lee's corridors twice a month to attend meetings held by Russian enthusiasts. Former inter-school rivalries took second place as the Russian scholars composed their constitution and by-laws, learned folk dances and songs, went to see Russian movies playing in the area, performed a skit based on an ancient Russian fairy tale and studied customs of both the peasants and czars in the days before the Russian Revolution.

While Premier Krushchev talked of having a troika, a three-man board, as the governing body of the United Nations, members of the Russian Club already had one — a traditional Russian folk dance which represented a sleigh drawn by three horses. The group also danced the "Karobushka" and "Karapet," using members' homes as their studios after school and on Saturdays and holidays.

Science Club Attends Film of Titov Flight

Russian embassy officials opened their doors to the Science Club members and allowed them to view the films of Cosmonaut Gherman Titov's space orbital flight. In other jaunts, the club visited the American Museum of Natural History and Hayden Planetarium in New York City during the late fall.

Speakers appearing before the club included a lecturer from the Weather Department with films of the successful launchings of the Tiros satellites. Later in the winter, a visiting New Zealand scientist addressed the club, explaining the characteristics and the environment of the shark family.

"Keep your eye on the balloon," commands Mr. Dean Longfellow, cracking his bullwhip in a demonstration for the Club.

SIGMA TRI-HI-Y Football Match Defeat Gains Funds for Library

Mapping out future plans demanded the talents of Sigma, Tri-Hi-Y's youngest member, during its organizational period. Instigating the school's first all female football game, this group earned forty dollars for the Arlington County Library Fund Drive even though they lost the bout to Alpha.

Christmas to Sigma members meant practicing yuletide carols and singing them at a home for the aged during the holiday season. As their contribution to the domestic exchange, the group adopted and entertained a guest during her visit.

STUDENT SAVINGS SYSTEM

Quarterly Dividends Lure Student Savers

"This year we get paid four times instead of twice!" exclaimed an excited Washington-Lee student who had deposited his allowance in the Students' Savings System. Adopting the policy of its affiliate First Federal Savings and Loan Company, the organization started paying dividends quarterly instead of semi-annually. By the end of the year, over two hundred depositors had received three thousand, five hundred dollars in dividends on the seventy thousand, four hundred dollars deposited in the organization. This represented an increase in dividends of two thousand, seven hundred dollars over last year's total amount.

SWIM CLUB

Swimmers Set Record At Championship Meet

During the fall the Swim Club sharpened its skills against area teams in preparation for the Southern Interscholastic Swimming and Diving Championships. Returning from the Southern meet, the girls brought with them the high score in the women's division of forty teams. Sue Johnson in the hundred yard freestyle and butterfly and Kathy Hennessey in the two and four hundred broke meet records. The boys placed fourth out of forty-five competing teams with Andy Grinstead taking first in the two hundred-yard freestyle race.

The New Zealand government asked another member of the club, Robin Johnson, to tour that country. In exhibitions there, she broke island records in the one hundred and ten-yard freestyle and two hundred and twenty-yard medley.

TEEN TYME

Area Club Competition Prompts Study of Bible

Representatives of four faiths, Protestant, Catholic, Jewish and Moslem, gathered weekly to discuss Bible history and theology at Teen Tyme meetings. Members of the non-denominational organization also engaged in frequent Bible quizzes to prepare themselves for meets with area clubs. The students defeated Falls Church, Wakefield and McLean as they vied for the coveted first place of Bible knowledge and the trip to the National Convention of Teen Tyme Clubs in Michigan.

Throughout the year, Teen Tymers gathered at church-recreation halls and private homes for parties and dances. Profits from the sale of candy in the spring after school allowed members to donate funds to the American Field Service and present a gift to the students of Washington-Lee.

TRANSCIVERS Radio Enthusiasts Buy, Rebuild Used Apparatus

Station K4BGA returned this year through the efforts of Transceivers Club, whose members spent much of the year repairing and rebuilding a used transmitter, receiver and other broadcasting apparatus. Purchased out of club dues, this equipment replaced the $1,500 worth of radio components stolen from the shop building two years ago.

After urging its members to apply for their novice radio operating license from the Federal Communications Commission, several club meetings dealt with the requirements. Those attending received instruction on radio code and theory.

VOCATIONAL OFFICE TRAINING

Student Employees Host Bosses at Fete

Providing a change from the crisp, business-like atmosphere of the office, the Vocational Office Training Club sponsored an employer-employee banquet in the spring. A guest speaker provided the entertainment for the evening.

During a homeroom period early in February, the business trainees addressed junior homerooms which had invited them to speak, passed out pamphlets about the different business fields and told of their own on-the-job experiences.

At evening meetings members of the club heard lectures on such subjects as computers and automation in business. The apprentices also discussed future occupational plans and methods for improving the current half-day work program.

WELCOME CLUB

Welcome Club Directs Puzzled Through Halls

Bewildered parents accepted the service of the Welcome Club during Back To School Night. Members stationed in the main office looked up schedules for parents having trouble deciphering room numbers on hastily scrawled notes.

Letters about the club program and a personal phone call augmented the tour of the building in an effort to make students feel at home. At Christmas, club members helped organize the custodians' party by buying gifts with money collected from the faculty and by decorating for the party.

ATWOOD REGIONAL POLITICAL SERIES

UNIVERSITY OF WASHINGTON

School Board Answers Appeal for Action

Decisions concerning two problems faced the school board at the beginning of the year. In response to parents' petitions, the board dealt a lethal blow to fraternities and sororities by devising stringent punishments for violators of the ban. Following the example of Fairfax, the board integrated sports for the first time in the history of Arlington County. The action became effective September 13, one day before the first football game of the season.

Mrs. Elizabeth Campbell, Chairman; B.A. M.A., Salem College, Columbia University; President, Greater Washington Educational Television Association; ten years on the school board.

Mrs. Ruth Cox, B.S., Syracuse University; Teaching Assistant at George Washington University; first year on the school board.

Dr. Laslo Ecker-Racz, B.S., Ph.D., Harvard University; member of the President's Advisory Commission on Intergovernmental Relations; first year on the school board.

Dr. Barnard Joy, B.S., M.A., Ed.D., Oregon State College, University of Maryland, George Washington University; U. S. Department of Agriculture; President of Virginia School Boards Association; fourteen years on the school board.

Mr. James Stockard, B.B.A., M.A., University of Texas, American University; Deputy Chief Training Branch, International Cooperation Administration; six years on the school board.

Mr. Ray E. Reid, Superintendent of Schools for Arlington County; B.S., M.A., College of William and Mary; Assistant Virginia State Superintendent of Public Instruction from 1951 to 1958.

Dr. Edward Braun, Assistant Superintendent for Business and Finance since 1948; B.A., M.A., Ph.D., Baldwin-Wallace College, University of Wisconsin.

Improvements Engross Superintendents

In order to meet the growing needs of Arlington County students, Superintendent Ray E. Reid and his assistants, during the 1961-62 term, made several innovations in the school system.

Educational television brought a variety of programs to elementary school children from the recently built station WETA, operating from Yorktown High School. Newly purchased equipment made classes in air-conditioning and refrigeration a possibility at Washington-Lee. Experimenting in new techniques, Wakefield introduced team teaching to the Arlington County school program. An appropriation of $60,000 meant additional science, language and mathematics laboratories for many schools.

Mr. Howard Bovee, Assistant Superintendent for Administration since 1958; B.S., M.A., U. S. Merchant Marine Academy, George Washington University.

Dr. Joseph Johnson, Assistant Superintendent for Instruction since 1958; B.A., M.A., Ed.D., East Texas State College, George Washington University.

Mr. Charles Walsh, Assistant Superintendent for Personnel since 1948; B.A., M.A., University of Tennessee, George Washington University.

WASHINGTON-LEE HIGH SCHOOL

ARLINGTON COUNTY PUBLIC SCHOOLS

JACKSON 7-7600

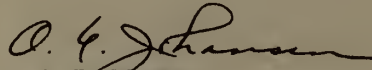

1300 NORTH QUINCY STREET, ARLINGTON 1, VIRGINIA

Dear Seniors:

You will soon be leaving Washington-Lee High School to enter a world beset by many difficulties. There are war-clouds on the horizon and we are facing the possibility of atomic destruction. Our future seems uncertain and insecure. In such a world you may think that we are facing a crisis so grave that it is foolish to strive for anything of permanent value. But, believe me, crisis as an excuse for not mastering ourselves is as old as the human race.

Forty-five years ago the people of the world were locked in life and death struggle on the soil of France and during that time there were many who felt that character development was of minor importance. Some years later came the great depression and we heard it said that character would not keep the wolf from the door. During the Second World War there came about once more a decline in moral values. However, the lesson of history has shown us often that a great catastrophe seldom destroys a great people.

So the main job for you is putting your personal life in order, enlarging, refining and strengthening your personal character, for it is your personal character that determines not only what you do, but how you do it. All that you have learned at Washington-Lee High School will be of little value to you unless it leads to constructive and significant action on your part. In the final analysis it is character which determines destiny and regardless of crisis we must finally come back to that starting point.

O. U. Johansen
Principal

Mr. O. U. Johansen, Principal; B.S., M.A., Ed.S., University of Minnesota; formerly Principal of Riverview High School and Director of Secondary Education, Sarasota, Florida.

Mr. Alexander Anderson, Assistant Principal in charge of Instruction; B.A., M.A., Montclair State, Columbia University.

Mrs. Doris Mortimer, Assistant Principal and Dean of Girls; B.S., M.A., Ohio State University, George Washington University.

Floridian Accepts Post As W-L Administrator

Two major changes took place in Washington-Lee's administrative staff this year. Mr. O. U. Johansen, principal, came to his post from Sarasota, Florida, where he served as Director of Secondary Education. Mr. Johansen spent the year becoming acquainted with Washington-Lee before attempting to initiate major changes.

Mrs. Doris Mortimer, formerly of Stratford Junior High School, also joined the staff. As Assistant Principal and Dean of Girls, Mrs. Mortimer co-ordinated the various school activities and the use and rental of school rooms and facilities.

In charge of grounds and maintenance, Mr. Harry Pitt continued as Dean of Boys. He also supervised personnel in all scholastic areas. Mr. Alexander Anderson, concluding his sixth year as Assistant Principal, organized teaching plans and had the responsibility for the master schedule.

Globetrotting Teachers Return from Trips

That well-traveled air pervaded Washington-Lee, as eight of its faculty returned from spending the summer abroad. The travelers included Mrs. Mary Campbell and Mrs. Sarah Cloud who visited Europe for a month. Col. Carl Brose took a two month European tour highlighted by a visit to Scotland. Col. Howard Hunter also visited the Continent. Two staff members heading south were Mrs. Ruth Crouse, who spent a month in the Virgin Islands, and Miss Elizabeth Huls, who went to Chile.

The faculty, 101 strong, underwent seventeen changes over the summer. Fourteen teachers joined the staff, and Mrs. Doris Mortimer assumed the position of Dean of Girls and Assistant Principal. Miss Mabel Allen acted as College Counselor, and Mr. Thomas Haynie become Guidance Director.

For thirty-five years of teaching service, Miss Sally Loving, Miss Jane Elliot, Miss Mabel Allen and Mrs. Marie Malott received awards at a presentation on the opening day of school, August 31.

Changes in Office Staff Occur During Vacation

Rearranging the desks in the office to make room for the new secretaries and their equipment was just one of the many pre-school activities of the office staff; another was the separation of the formerly joint student and teacher bulletins.

Three staff additions included Mrs. Joan King and Mrs. Martha Scoll, secretaries to the assistant principals and Mrs. Roxanne Smith, secretary to the Guidance Department. Mrs. Gean Riviello assumed the position of secretary to Principal O. U. Johansen. Mrs. Ruth Watkins and Mrs. Lois Downs moved to new registrar and attendance offices.

Third Lunch Eliminates Congestion in Cafeteria

Despite signs designed to guide students to milk, snack and hot lunch lines, confusion aggravated by overcrowded conditions existed for the first three days. "The third lunch tried later this year helped to solve the problem," commented Miss Frances LeBagh, cafeteria supervisor.

In addition to the regular hot lunches and à la carte items, the cafeteria staff attempted to vary the menu with seasonal items. Old favorites such as tuna fish sandwiches and fudge squares appeared in the prepared lunches. The dieticians also prepared cream puffs and cinnamon buns, popular desserts, at least once per month.

Leading Arlington County in milk sales, staff members sold twenty-five hundred cartons of milk per day to students buying the daily cuisine and to those who brought their own lunches.

Thick chocolate filling drips into a waiting pie shell as Mrs. Loise Marcy prepares a favorite student dessert.

Sanding Desks Busies Workers Over Summer

Unmarred desks greeted returning students last fall because of the sanding and refinishing efforts of the Custodial Staff. In addition, they covered many badly scarred desks with colorful formica tops. The twenty-three man force, under the direction of Chief Custodian Donald McInturff, also aided in placing new seats and mats in the auditorium and in repairing the gym bleachers.

Despite night school, athletic events, dances and snow, the staff, working in two eight-hour shifts, kept the school neat and running efficiently. During the warmer months, the custodians' biggest job was the upkeep of surrounding school property. The addition of a new power lawn mower to their equipment aided the staff in keeping the athletic fields and school lawns trimmed, and frequent waterings kept them green.

Year of Purpose Accomplished

Purpose — final grades, promotion, graduation, all proclaim a hope realized, a threshold crossed.

Get-Up-And-Go Distinguish Sophomores

Unequalled interest in school affairs distinguished sophomores as a class with real get-up-and-go. Backed by an enrollment larger than that of either the juniors or seniors, their activities ranged from float-making for the "Old Oaken Bucket" game to challenging the faculty to the annual basketball free-for-all. En masse, they enthusiastically contributed to the AFS drive, joined the cheering section and provided action in sports events and topped the juniors in yearbook sales.

Junior Display Places Second in Contest

"Wring out George Washington players and hang them up to dry" proclaimed the junior class float at the Beta Club contest before the annual Turkey Day game. Student Council judges awarded the display second prize in the competition.

In January the class officers wrote letters to the Manhasset High School exchangees, welcoming them to Washington-Lee and explaining some of the school traditions. The class also participated in the campaign to sell American Field Service shares.

During the spring months the prospective seniors challenged their predecessors to a battle of skill on the basketball court and elected the students who would attend Boys' and Girls' State.

Complete Term Papers, Study for Exams

"Nobody's looking, so I'll just . . ." thought junior Muddy Boggs just before he became hopelessly entangled in the almost invisible wire barricade that sent him, books and all, sprawling over the grassy terrain of the white house.

Senior Officers Recreate Missing Class Banner

Brandishing needles and thimbles, senior officers recreated the elusive class flag, which had disappeared in November. In a departure from normal duties, the president and company fastened the green "S" on a white field and returned the banner to its former position on the senior flag pole.

During the months of December and January, senior homeroom officers confronted a myriad of activities. Treasurers painfully extracted class dues from procrastinators, as secretaries, determining mortar board sizes, wound tape measures around the heads of prospective graduates. Presidents frantically sought student approval for the class project and double checked the list of names to be read at commencement exercises.

Spring weather brought the annual Junior-Senior rivalry, March 23. Traditional class antagonisms resulted in midnight jaunts to school, flag pole shinnying and emblem stealing. With the upperclassmen presenting entertainment, the stag supper at the end of the year combined the best features of old class night and the customary dinner.

Accepting the responsibilities of class president for the second year, Mike Omohundro pauses after looking at the day's agenda.

YEAR'S END –

"Year at whose wide flung door I sing!
Year of the purpose accomplished!"
